Order Held Assurance Against Meddling in American Politics.

Nazi Group Made Taboo to 400,000

Unit Denies Having Any Members With German Allegiance.

The Nazi government has forbidden German citizens in this country to belong to organizations like Fritz Kuhn's Amerika-Deutsche Volksbund, or German-American Bund.

Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, German Ambassador to the United States, so informed Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday.

Since relatively few German citizens belong to these American-Nazi organizations, Dieckhoff's statement was interpreted as an assurance that the Hitler government does not want its citizens interfering in America's internal affairs.

At the same time it permits Berlin to disavow responsibility for Nazi activities in this country, so long as they are carried on by those of German blood who are American citizens.

Intermingling in Disfavor.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler's policy has been to endeavor to keep German nationals in other lands together by means of organizations established abroad under a special department of Berlin's foreign office. This is called the "Auslands Organization," and is headed by Ernest Wilhelm Bohle.

The government and the Nazi Party frequently have disolaimed any official connection with or interest in foreign societies where German nationals and the citizens of other nations intermingle. Nazi eagerness to keep a close bond between citizens abroad and the fatherland was exemplified February 10 when the government decreed that nationals abroad must advise German consulates of their movements.

Kuhn on Way to Belgium.

Fritz Kuhn, an American citizen, was reported yesterday to be on his way to Antwerp, Belgium. His uniformed, goose-stepping Nazi legions in this country have aroused storms of protest and precipitated a Department of Justice inquiry. It was reported last month, however, that the Federal agents had found no violation of law in their investigation.

The German-American Bund has camps in various parts of the country, the largest of which is Camp Nordland, N. J. An attempt to establish one at Southbury, Conn., was balked last December when the citizens, many of them descended from soldiers of the American Revolution, adopted a special ordinance aimed at the pro-Nazi organization.

Two weeks ago, in Buffalo, N. Y., a general riot call was sounded

Guards Increased In U. S. Spy Scare

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Extra guards were posted today at important military and naval positions in the metropolitan area as agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation secretly sought higher-ups in the spy ring accused of selling military information to an unnamed European power.

Romm, Ex-D. C. Correspondent, Feared Shot in Russian Purge

Reds Silent on Possible Witness for Trial of Former Leaders.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 28—The possibility that Vladimir Romm, former Washington correspondent for the official government newspaper Izvestia, might have been secretly shot was seen today as the government went ahead with plans to bring 21 fallen Soviet leaders before a military tribunal Wednesday in a gigantic conspiracy trial.

Efforts to ascertain whether Romm would be brought from prison to testify against his friend Nikolai Bucharin, former editor of Ixvestia and a leader in the alleged conspiracy, met with failure.

The impression prevailed in some foreign circles that Romm, his usefulness ended after he had testified against the famous journalist, Karl Radek, in a similar trial a year ago, had been shot along with Dmitri Bukhartseff, former Izvestia correspondent in Berlin, who also testified at the Radek trial.

It was impossible to learn from Soviet officials whether Romm and Bukhartseff still were alive.

VLADIMIR ROMM.

Meanwhile the official Soviet press said the firing squad awaits the 21 men who go on trial Wednesday.

Izvestia indicated that past trials such as that of Radek had disclosed only a part of the conspirators and crimes, but that a detailed expose would be made in the forthcoming trial.

Bulletin Gives Hope Pershing May Get Well

'Outlook Quite Promising,' Doctor Says; General Talks With Son.

By the Associated Press.

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 28—Gen. John J. Pershing, with a ruggedness born of life-long battle, cast off some of the ravages of uremic poisoning today and gave evidence of such improvement that his physicians declared themselves "distinctly encouraged."

The general improved enough tonight to call his son, Warren, to his bedside for a long talk.

It was the first time Warren had visited with his father since shortly after arrival from Palm Beach, Thursday.

"Gen. Pershing has improved considerably . . . the outlook is quite promising," Dr. Roland Davison announced in a bulletin that brought smiles of joy to the tired faces of the aged World War commander's family.

"However," he cautioned, "I definitely realize the improvement may be only temporary, and until further time has elapsed I can make no statement regarding the probability of recovery."

Sergt. C. C. Shaeffer, the general's devoted orderly for 17 years, said the physicians told him that if they could keep the old soldier in his present condition for 24 hours they could "pull him out of it."

Miss May Pershing, the general's only sister, appeared happy at the turn in events. She walked in the sunshine with Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of one of Pershing's closest friends.

Pine Requests Woman Aide as U. S. Attorney

Appointment of a woman to succeed him as Assistant United States Attorney here has been recommended to the Department of Justice by District Attorney David A. Pine, The Post learned last night.

Pine, a few hours after the Senate, without objection, confirmed his nomination to succeed former District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, admitted he had sent the department the name of a woman to fill the vacancy in his corps of assistants. However, he declined to reveal her name lest Attorney General Cummings and President Roosevelt should cause embarrassment for her by failing to approve his selection.

Pine's confirmation was voted without the usual delay of at least one day in consideration of Presidential nominations when Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, asked the Senate to approve the appointment on the unanimous consent calendar.

If the Justice Department and the President follow Pine's recommendation, it will be the first time a woman has been named to the post in the District since Garnett, who recently resigned, removed two women assistant attorneys when he took office in 1934.

Garnett's action aroused a storm of protest from leaders of the women's bar and other feminist groups. The former district attorney, in explaining his attitude in a newspaper interview, had said the women, Pearl McCall and Mrs. Rebekah Greathouse, were:

"Occupying their time hunting up fleeing husbands for distracted wives and worrying about canned goods."

This statement and others from Garnett brought him denunciation from every woman's organization of importance in the city. The attack was so strong that Garnett

King Zog's Sisters, in N.Y., Ask 'Privacy Granted to Tourists'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Three sisters of King Zog of Albania, the Princesses Myzejen, Ruhie and Maxhide, reached New York today, a little agog over their arrival but serenely indifferent alike to New York night clubs and prospective American husbands.

They aren't interested in getting American husbands or in seeing the frivolous side of this or any other American town, the princesses said through an interpreter.

But they are interested in seeing how Yellowstone National Park lines up with Albania generally in the matter of scenery. Albania, the princesses indicated, is a country one ought to see if one likes scenery like mountains and trees and peasants and wild goats.

The Italian liner Conte di Savoia brought the princesses.

The liner entered New York harbor about noon, but high winds held up docking until nearly 6 o'clock.

Among a great crowd awaiting the arrival were Faik Konitza, the Albanian Minister, and representatives of the American State Department. They waited and shivered for close to an hour.

Finally the gangplank was put in place and those permitted went on board. The princesses still were in their staterooms. A steward said they had taken an afternoon nap and were dressing.

The three princesses came out smiling.

A man connected with their party handed out a statement. It read in translation:

"Having seen most of Europe, we thought we would spend a short vacation in the United States. We have read and heard a good deal about this great country and its epic genius in turning a waste continent into a pageant of flourishing cities in less than 300 years.

"We are curious to have a glimpse at a country with such wonderful achievements. We should like also to learn something about the social work being done here on behalf of the needy. If time and weather permit we should like to visit Yellow-

Nazis Face Army.

By the Associated Press.

Graz, Austria, Feb. 28.—Both the Austrian army and mutinous Nazis were ready for instant action tonight in the tense atmosphere of the armed truce that balked yesterday's scheduled Nazi march on Vienna.

Police patrolled the streets of the metropolis of the province of Styria, 90 miles southwest of Vienna, to prevent the assemblage of more than three people. Armed soldiers cruised on motorcycles.

The Graz garrison, reinforced by federal troops from Vienna, was in a continuous state of preparedness.

Nazi headquarters was the scene of intense activity with messengers constantly coming and going with orders to and reports from field workers.

80,000 Held Prepared.

In the three provinces of Styria, Carinthia and Upper Austria which form a belt across the center of the country 80,000 Nazis were reported to be in uniform at their homes awaiting the call to action.

No overt disorderly acts by Nazis were reported outside Linz, provincial capital of Upper Austria, which lies along the German state of Bavaria.

At Linz the windows of three large Jewish stores were smashed. A boycott against Jews was started and Nazis were stationed before each Jewish shop to take down the names of customers.

Nazis all through the provinces, especially at Graz, however, were in hair-trigger temper. They resent hotly that troops were sent to Graz yesterday to halt the march on Vienna. Throughout Sunday planes circled low over the city, machine guns and batteries of light field artillery were placed in strategic positions outside the city.

Nazi radicals declared they might or might not follow any demands made on them by the minister of the interior, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, when he arrives in Graz, perhaps tomorrow.

Race Track Issue Is Revived for D.C. By Rep. Sacks' Bill

Washington's annual race track controversy apparently was headed for revival last night under a new bill to be introduced by Representative Leon Sacks (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, noted horsewoman, was reported District bound from California to support the new measure. The horses first ran in the District in May, 1769, and on April 12, 1908, the last race was run at old Benning.

Efforts to legalize the sport have been a hot local issue ever since former Representative Loring Black, of New York, introduced a bill in 1934 "to spite the ministers."

3 Planes, 3 Ships Seek To Rescue 175 From Ice

Moscow, Feb. 28 (AP).—Three planes, an icebreaker and two other ships worked today to rescue 175 fishermen stranded on drifting ice on the Caspian Sea since a storm blew them away from the shore ten days ago.

Radio reports said one plane was forced down on ice by fog. For several days the fliers have been dropping provisions for the fishermen and their horses, as well as notes directing them how to reach the shore. Of 437 originally adrift all but 175 have reached land.

48-Mile Gale Here Sweeps Man to Death

A winter gale that swept through the District yesterday reached velocities of 48 miles an hour and also:

Hurled Robert A. Dulin, 35-year-old salesman, to his death beneath the wheels of a 5-ton sand truck.

Sent fire equipment on 30 alarms, the department's busiest day in nearly a year.

Hurled whole trees, and parts of others into the street, blocking traffic.

Blew down the Potomac and Anacostia rivers so hard that harbor police reported the lowest tides in 15 years, and anglers fished from dry land where water had flowed a few hours earlier.

Smashed windows and disrupted air schedules.

Sent Washington's pedestrians reeling along the streets, their heads bent into the wind, their coats flapping.

Brought promise of the year's lowest temperature, 14 degrees above zero predicted by the Weather Bureau before this morning.

Trapped Miss Mary R. Bauer and her car in a network of live wires when five telephone poles crashed into a campus road at the University of Maryland.

Stranded five Alexandria fishermen on a Potomac River Island for 12 hours.

Dulin was killed, police said, when a gust swept him off balance from a street car platform at Fifteenth and H streets northeast, into the path of a sand truck driven by Nicholas Krick, 31, of Millersville, Md. The 5-ton truck ran over Dulin, crushing his skull.

His feet were still on the platform when police examined the body. Krick was released in custody of the company's attorney, to appear at a coroner's inquest. Dulin was the eighteenth traffic victim this year.

Firemen had answered 30 alarms, none of them false, at 6 o'clock last night. Their first call, early yesterday, came to remove a tree in the 900 block, First street southeast. During the busiest period from noon to 3 p. m. 16 alarms were turned in, three of them within a few minutes for brush fires in Southeast Washington.

Firemen battled half an hour to extinguish a blaze in a two-story

Moore Wouldn't Be President, He Says

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 28 (AP).—Gov. A. Harry Moore said today he would not be a candidate for President "if it were offered to me." A Democrat who resigned as United States Senator to become Governor a third time, Moore said he wanted to hang up his gloves when his administration ends in three years.

Addressing the New Jersey Press Association's convention, he said:

Lawyer Begs Chance to Deal With Kidnapers of Son, 12

Police Agree to 'Lay Off;' $60,000 Ransom Demand Undenied.

By the Associated Press.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Murray Levine, well-to-do New York lawyer, today appealed to "whoever is holding my son" to "open negotiations" for ransom.

Peter Levine, an imaginative 12-year-old boy who liked to play "G-man," vanished on the way home from school last Thursday.

The father made from his $30,000 home in New Rochelle the first statement on the affair to come from either the family or the authorities.

"You may say," said Levine, his voice trembling, "that whoever is holding my son is guaranteed a safe channel for communicating with me to open negotiations."

Federal and Westchester County authorities, he added, had promised to permit him to dicker without interference "with those who may be holding my boy."

Asked whether he knew definitely that his son had been kidnaped for $60,000 ransom, Levine responded:

"I can say nothing now. I must have a completely free hand to save my boy."

One source reported the boy's handwriting was being studied for comparison with that found on reputed ransom note.

Jane Cowl and Lillian Gish Support Pepper's Bill to Establish a Government Bureau of Fine Arts.

Four yawning stage stars played to the smallest house in their careers here yesterday—all for the sake of art.

Jane Cowl, Lillian Gish, Burgess Meredith and Orson Welles, each somewhat sleepy, very hungry, and supremely polite, were up at an unaccustomed 10 a. m. to appear at hearings before a Senate sub-committee.

They testified their approval of the bill of Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), Florida, which would set up in the Government a bureau of fine arts. Each of them attracts theaters full of customers at as much as $15.50 per customer. But they drew only a dozen Senate stenographers and the old man with the beard, who attends all Senate hearings.

Economy Aims Abandoned in Reorganization

But New Concessions Are Made to Opponents in Senate Debate.

By Robert C. Albright.

With economy objectives discarded, but carrying new concessions to gathering opposition, the Administration's government reorganization bill yesterday received its baptismal fire of Senate criticism and defense.

The Senate heard Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, champion the measure as the culmination of a half century's effort to bring order out of scrambled Federal bureaus and functions.

Before the chamber temporarily laid the bill aside to pass the $1,402,000,000 Treasury-Postoffice bill and the $250,000,000 conference report on emergency relief, Byrnes admitted reorganization economies would be small.

"But whenever you promote efficiency, you promote economy," the South Carolinian insisted.

Supreme Court Upholds Power Of Labor Board

Right to Ban Recognition of Company Unions Is Affirmed.

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld the power of the National Labor Relations Board to ban employer recognition of so-called company unions and voided a Federal district court injunction against picketing.

It also refused to review litigation in which six employes of the New York Rapid Transit Co. challenged a New York State court ruling upholding validity of a "closed shop" contract. The court stated merely it dismissed the appeal "for the want of final judgment."

Three labor act tests were among 22 decisions handed down by the court in a busy session.

Justices refused to take jurisdiction in an appeal from a lower-court judgment upholding the conviction of 12 Kansas City election officials for conspiracy to commit frauds in the November, 1936, general election. The court declined to review a decision by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals affirming the convictions in the Federal District Court at Kansas City.

In two of the Labor Board cases, presenting virtually the same issue, the court upheld board orders directing the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, Inc., and the Pacific Greyhound Lines, Inc., to withdraw recognition from company-formed and dominated unions. There were

'Mayors' Are Cool To Bill to Return D. C. to Maryland

A suggested bill to cede back to Maryland all of the District save the Capitol, the White House, the Mall and other Federal property was greeted coolly yesterday by Washington's "mayors," the chairmen of the Senate and House District Committees.

The suggestion came from Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who has been struggling with the District tax bill for the last six weeks.

"Maryland would be glad to take the District back," commented Chairman Palmisano, of Maryland, of the House District Committee. "But the trouble with the Nichols bill is that it would give Maryland only the skimmed milk and would keep the cream for the Federal Government."

Chairman King of the Senate District Committee stated emphatically he was opposed to the idea. "George Washington envisioned a Federal city here that would be free of State control," he said. "I stand with Washington on that."

Baruch Asks Policy Change By New Deal For Recovery

Financier Puts Blame on Administration, Not Business.

By Sidney Olson.

Unless the Administration's policies are drastically changed, "there is no hope of re-employment and substantial recovery," Bernard M. Baruch, friend and adviser to five Presidents, told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday.

Baruch said the Administration's policies, more than anything business "could or should do," were responsible for unemployment in the present recession. He added:

"If those policies are not changed, neither business nor Government can ever solve this most terrible of all our problems."

Says Index Would Rise.

The silver-haired, 6-foot-4 financier—the man Wall Streeters still call "The Chief"—said, slowly and carefully:

"If it (national policy) could be changed along the lines I have tried to indicate, I believe we would have a rapid and immediate rise in all economic indexes."

Placing his long hands delicately together, fingertips to fingertips, before his face, he continued, in the deliberate and thoughtful manner that held the usually restive attention of the committee members for two full hours.

"I have heard recently some public men reproach business for the alleged failure to step forward and employ the millions of jobless, and intimate that if business doesn't, Government will.

Scores False Promise.

"In addition to being illogical and unfair, that raises hopes that can never be realized and expresses a promise to unfortunates that never can be fulfilled."

Baruch's testimony was not as directly critical of Administration policies themselves as of general economic thinking today, as he took up many phases of the problems confronting modern civilization. But throughout his statement he emphasized the "pressing need" for a change in the Government's attitude toward business and a "wise readjustment" of the entire tax structure to obtain "the greatest possible revenue with the greatest possible encouragement to production and business activity."

He said: "The single missing element in a great forward movement is a feeling of security—a belief that money can be spent or invested without confiscation of reasonable profits by inordinate taxation, that American assets will not again be subject to some great arbitrary change in the value of money, that there are to be no further dis-

U. S. Too Slow In Air Defense, Martin Warns

Plane Builder Testifies in Favor of $10,000,000 for Experiments.

By the Associated Press.

Congress received a warning yesterday from Glenn L. Martin, pioneer airplane manufacturer, that the United States was not keeping up with the development of aircraft as well as the national defense required.

Testifying at hearings on the Administration's proposal for a $1,050,000,000 expansion of the fleet and a $106,000,000 increase in naval planes, he declared:

"We must have supremacy in the air to maintain a line of battleships. You must have supremacy both in size and number to be safe."

Asked what would happen if the fleet were in the Pacific and a "possible target" approached off the southeast coast, Martin replied:

"The airplane might be the only weapon that would turn the trick."

He indorsed a suggestion of Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the House Naval Committee, that Congress add from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 to the naval expansion program for experimental aircraft work, not only concerning planes but also such munitions ordnance as the "aerial mines" which Lester P. Barlow, inventor, says he has developed. Barlow contends these mines will revolutionize battle tactics.

Martin told the committee his company was studying plans for a 250,000-pound airplane which could carry two 2,000-pound bombs 11,000 miles at a speed of 380 miles an hour and at an altitude of 25,000 feet.

He said he believed the company could deliver such a craft in about three and one-half years. Its initial cost would be between $6,500,000 and $7,000,000, he added, but such planes would cost between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000 if manufactured in "reasonable quantities."

Chairman Vinson adjourned the Naval Committee's hearing on the armament program shortly after Martin testified.

Politics and People

N. Y. Democratic Governorship Choice Vague as Jackson's Ardor Dims, Lehman's Grows.

By Franklyn Waltman

Seldom do American political aspirants sing a swan song while their stars are in the ascendency. Usually men do not retire from the field of political battle until they are driven from it. Yet that is what Robert H. Jackson, who will be confirmed this week as Solicitor General, apparently did in his remarks last week to the Young Democratic Club of New York.

WALTMAN.

For many months now Mr. Jackson has been regarded as campaigning hell-bent for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in New York—a prize second only to the Presidency, because it is a springboard to the latter. There have been reports that Mr. Jackson was the President's choice for the chair at Albany. Everything Mr. Jackson has done recently has been interpreted in the light of this gubernatorial aspiration. Even his presence at the dinner which he addressed last week was reported as a move to advance his gubernatorial prospects.

But at the outset of his remarks, Mr. Jackson asserted that if the Senate confirmed him as Solicitor General—about which there was no doubt at the time—his responsibilities "will be more exclusively professional and will not permit me the luxury of political controversy." He said that "tonight may be my last opportunity for some time to speak with comparative freedom about some of our political and social problems" and added "for me this may be a sort of bachelor dinner."

Political Washington interprets all this to mean that Mr. Jackson is finished with the New York gubernatorial race—that he is content to be Solicitor General and will not lift a finger to get his party's nomination. If it comes to him he will take it, Washington supposes—who would not? But in New York politics, as elsewhere, you get only what you fight for.

The New York political outlook is none too rosy for aspiring Democrats. As one party official expressed it, "Bob Jackson could be elected Governor, but he cannot be nominated, while John Bennett (State attorney general) can be nominated, but he cannot be elected." And Republican Thomas E. Dewey, foe of racketeers, "just laffs and laffs."

Be that as it may, "Bob" Jackson, whose heart once yearned for Albany, now apparently is finding a new glamor and joie de vivre in Washington.

Mr. Jackson's remarks, incidentally, also gave added color to reports from along the Hudson that Gov. Herbert H. Lehman will seek a fourth term. Two years ago he wanted to retire, but was persuaded to run by President Roosevelt and Jim Farley, the latter staging a great ballyhoo demonstration at the Philadelphia convention. This year the White House will bring no pressure to bear on Gov. Lehman to run again—not since his letter last summer denouncing the Roosevelt Supreme Court program. Indeed, New Dealers said some very nasty things about the Governor because of that letter. That is the reason, it is rumored, why he will run again—just to show them!

The White House apparently continues to mess in local political contests. Now comes Representative Otha D. ("Hog Caller") Wearin, of Iowa, who, in announcing his candidacy for the Senate, asserts he is doing so "after a series of conferences at the White House and with Administration leaders." Mr. Wearin, ardent New Deal champion, will seek to unseat Senator Guy M. Gillette, who is a more conservative Democrat. Senator Gillette was one of the first to announce his opposition to the Supreme Court reorganization program.

Hard-working, likeable, dirt-farmer, 35-year-old Representative Wearin is said by Iowans to be a formidable challenge to Senator Gillette. His chief claim to distinction while in Congress, however, has been his "hog calling" contest with Representative Robert Mouton, of Louisiana. He looks so insignificant that when he first came here he was refused admission by House doorkeepers.

Another Western Senatorial contest coming up is that between Senator James Pinckney Pope, Idaho Democrat, and Representative D. Worth Clark. In Idaho the situation is the reverse of that in Iowa. Mr. Clark, 36, is a conservative Democrat; Senator Pope is the ardent New Dealer. Their contest may provide a test of what the West thinks of Roosevelt foreign policy. Representative Clark is an ardent isolationist and will seek to make that an issue in Idaho. Senator Pope, not only supports the President's policy, but believes in even greater international co-operation.

Even though the White House apparently is still incensed at those who opposed the President's Supreme Court program, it seems to be unwilling to fight to the finish for those who supported it. Latest example was Senator William H. Dieterich, who, unable to count on White House support, withdrew as a candidate for re-election. President Roosevelt said a good word for Senator Dieterich, but sent no letters into Illinois (a la Barkley, Duffey, Pepper) when the Horner faction flatly turned thumbs down on the Senator and the Kelley-Nash faction said they preferred another. So the contest goes to a finish without Senator Dieterich, who even withdrew his pledged word from Senator Pat Harrison in the floor leadership fight in order to please the White House.

A strange sight was Thomas S. Rhea, defeated in 1934 for the governorship of Kentucky by Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, going to the White House to find out who he would support in Kentucky's senatorial feud this year. He came out declaring his support of Senator Alben W. Barkley, the White House candidate. We wonder what job Mr. Rhea will get during the next few months.

This White House messing in local fights gives Democratic National Chairman Jim Farley a big pain. Basking in Florida's sunshine, Jim mixed business with pleasure by laying a cornerstone for the Miami postoffice. Strictly neutral, he praised both Senator Claude Pepper and his challenger, Representative Mark Wilcox. He said both were his friends. Word from Florida is that Mr. Wilcox is pushing the Senator against the ropes, despite his White House support.

Most fantastic of political gossip is word which filters in from Maryland that Mauritz A. Hallgren, former Washington newspaperman, will challenge Senator Millard E. Tydings for the Democratic senatorial nomination. Serious, bespectacled, 37-year-old Mr. Hallgren is remembered here as the United Press correspondent at the State Department and subsequently, after a period in Germany, as the Washington correspondent of The Nation. He leans to Marxism, wrote a critical book about the President and his New Deal titled "The Gay Reformer," and more recently another opus on national defense policies titled "The Tragic Fallacy." It is said he will oppose Senator Tydings because he has not supported the New Deal. All we know is that Mr. Hallgren has resigned his position as associate editor of the Baltimore Sun.

Store Sales Increased.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—Retail department store sales in the Fifth Reserve District in January increased 3 per cent over the January, 1937, sales, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today. The figures were based on a survey of 30 stores.

Income Taxes Slated for D.C. In House Shift

Nichols and Two Others on the Committee Revise Their Attitude.

By James D. Secrest.

The business privilege tax will be dropped from the pending District tax bill and the income levy will be retained, probably with a graduated scale, Chairman Nichols, of the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs, predicted yesterday as he announced that he had reversed his position.

The overwhelming opposition of local business interests to the business privilege tax, Nichols said, had persuaded him to change his mind.

As the sub-committee prepared to revise the bill, either today or tomorrow, indications were that it would approve the income tax unanimously.

Two Change Stand.

Representatives Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, champion of the income tax, and Cole (Republican), of New York, never have wavered in their support of it. Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, while somewhat uncertain a few days ago, said he now favors an income levy. Representative Arnold (Democrat), of Illinois, although never for a sales tax, has indicated he will go along with the majority.

Nichols also stated he believes $1.60 will be an ample rate for real estate. The present bill proposes $1.75, which was voted last year.

A beer tax, of between $2 and $3 a barrel, and a provision repealing the 60-40 law relating to Federal payments to the District also will be included in the revised bill, Nichols said.

The measure will not be ready for the full District Committee when it meets tomorrow, but Nichols hopes to have it in shape for a House vote on the next District day, March 14.

"You can't ignore the objections of a majority of people from any jurisdiction in writing a tax measure," he said in explaining his reversal.

"I don't believe, however, that a majority of the citizens of Washington want a sales tax, as the business men tried to convince us."

The sub-committee is expected to exempt members of Congress from the income tax when revising it. Committee members have become convinced that they will never even get the bill on the House floor unless they do so.

Influenced by Testimony.

They also have been influenced by the testimony of the District Committee on Fair Taxation, Roger Whiteford, counsel for the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and others who stated that the levy on Congressmen is unimportant and would return very little revenue to the District.

Just what form the income tax will take is still uncertain, but Nichols said he favors a graduated scale as the most equitable and other sub-committee members have expressed similar views.

Nichols listened, however, to a delegation representing the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation, which had proposed that the local levy be based on one-sixth of the Federal income tax payments of District residents.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman, predicted that such a levy would raise $2,500,000 a year and at the same time would permit a $3,000,000 relief appropriation.

"The District would save $100,000 at once by not having to set up special tax regulations and an appeals system," she said.

Besides Mrs. Boyle, the delegation included Arthur Bernstein, Arnold Tolles and William Vickrey.

While District officials believe that the tax would be difficult to collect from nonresidents who earn part of their income in Washington, its sponsors insist that it is "the simplest, clearest, and most easily understood tax bill that has ever been proposed for the District."

The delegation left a copy of the proposed bill with Nichols but refused to disclose its details.

A copy of the return that would be used by District residents was released, however, to show its simplicity. The sponsors pointed out that a District resident in filing his District income tax would need only to list his Federal payment, figure out a sixth of it and list that, and deduct credit for income taxes paid to the States, if any.

They insisted that the calculation of payment by nonresident wage earners in Washington would be equally as simple.

The business privilege tax was assailed yesterday on the House floor during a brief District day session.

Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, who several years ago sponsored four District tax bills, later rejected by the Senate, started the discussion. He cited the case of an owner of a co-operative apartment who was required to pay a $10 license fee because he had rented the apartment.

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, joined in the discussion, and both agreed that the business privilege tax should not be continued.

New York-Washington Highway Plan Backed in Preference to Transcontinental Road.

"The proposed highway between the cities of Washington and New York is more likely to be needed than the transcontinental highways suggested," H. L. Wilson, Undersecretary of Agriculture, wrote yesterday to Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the Senate Roads Committee.

Wilson also said McKellar's plan to construct "superhighways" across the Nation, financed by tolls, "would not be in accord with the program of the President." Traffic conditions in metropolitan areas were bad, and outlets from large cities were needed more than transcontinental roads, asserted Wilson.

Congressional Democrats yesterday selected one of Herbert Hoover's Palo Alto, Calif., neighbors to be executive secretary of their National Congressional Committee. He is Victor Hunt Harding, 50 years old, secretary to Representative John J. McGrath, of California. Former newspaperman and lawyer, Harding taught political science at Leland Stanford University and at the University of California. He was a captain of infantry during the World War and has been active in veterans' affairs.

The Democratic National Congressional Committee has the duty of electing Democrats to the House. Harding succeeds the late Charles S. (Buck) Hayden.

The appointment of an additional Federal judge for the Northern District of Alabama has been asked by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama. The new judge is sought to assume the duties of Senior Judge David J. Davis, ill since December, and would give the district two judges if Judge Davis recovers sufficiently to resume his duties. The new judge, like all others, would be named for life.

A joint resolution to memorialize Gov. Frank Merriam, of California, to pardon Thomas Mooney, was approved yesterday by a Senate judiciary sub-committee. Mooney is serving a life sentence after his conviction for the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco. His supporters contend he was convicted on false and perjured testimony.

Senator Hattie Caraway's campaign for re-election was further complicated yesterday when Representative John L. McClellan, of the Sixth District of Arkansas, announced he would be an opposing candidate. J. Rosser Venable, of Little Rock, Ark., entered the race several weeks ago so the contest is now a three-cornered affair.

La Follette Blames Dictators for Want

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Gov. Philip La Follette of Wisconsin in an address at the Town Hall and Economic Club dinner tonight said "dictatorships will always follow when there is not enough wealth to go around among the people."

He asserted that use of material and human resources was the only way by which we can produce prosperity that will in turn produce a standard of living which will support and maintain democratic institutions.

Japan Buys Scrap Rails Used by Virginia Utility

Newport News, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Newport News Daily Press said today that the scrap rail which Ben Schwartz, Inc., of Newport News, bought from the Richmond-Ashland Railway Co., has been bought by the Japanese government for use in China.

The newspaper said it "presumably" will be used "in transporting troops in territory occupied by the Japanese army (in China)." The 2,800-ton shipment will be sent there in April.

Ten Navy Officers Made Commanders

President Roosevelt yesterday approved promotion of ten lieutenant commanders in the Navy Construction Corps to the rank of commander.

The officers, with their present stations and home addresses, were Ralph S. McDowell, Bureau of Construction and Repair, Easley, Ala.; Frederick B. Britt, jr., office of superintending constructor, Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Newport News, Portsmouth, Va.

Morgenthau Plans To Slow Treasury Borrowing Efforts

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Treasury contemplates no borrowing March 15 except through sale of discount bills previously announced.

A total of $450,000,000 of Treasury bills maturing around March 15 will be paid off in cash from income tax collections, Morgenthau said, and holders of $455,000,000 of 3 per cent Treasury notes maturing will be offered a new security in exchange.

The bill issues to which the Secretary referred are a series of $50,000,000 weekly offers which began yesterday and will continue until $200,000,000 to $300,000,000 have been raised.

Va. Utility Will Spend $2,500,000 This Year

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—The board of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. has approved new construction work throughout the company's system for 1938 which will cost approximately $2,500,000, officials of the company announced today.

Of this amount about $650,000 will be for improvements in power station equipment and in rehabilitation of the electric transmission and distribution system, officials said.

9 to Be Named To Decide D.C. Laundry Wage

Representatives of Workers, Employers, Public to Be Chosen This Week.

Nine representatives to the minimum wage conference March 15 of the women workers in the laundry and dry cleaning establishments will be selected this week, it was announced yesterday by Miss Gwen Geach, secretary to the District Minimum Wage Board.

The wage conference is composed of three members each from the employers group, employes group and the public.

Since the employers group is composed of power and hand laundries and dry cleaning establishments, the board has previously announced that each group should submit the names of three members each of their respective groups.

Of the nine employer members submitted to the board, three will be selected for service on the wage conference.

The dry cleaners are slated to select three members tonight and the power and hand laundries will select three members each at separate meetings Thursday night.

All employe groups have been invited to attend a meeting tomorrow night in the District Building where nine members will be selected. Of these, three will be designated to sit on the wage conference by the Minimum Wage Board.

In the meantime, the board has been busy with its own selection of the three representatives of the public. One of the public group will be chairman of the conference.

The power laundries are represented by the Laundry Dry Cleaning Associtaion.

Approximately 4,500 women workers in the District will be affected by the new weekly minimum wage which the board will order at the termination of the wage conferences.

Under the old minimum-wage standards, women workers in the laundry establishments received a $15 weekly minimum. At present, the estimated weekly wage is $10.90. This figure was released by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor as the result of an extensive study of the industry made last spring.

Women in the dry cleaning establishments, according to the same study, received a weekly minimum of $12.80. Three-fifths of the women in this industry earned less than $15 weekly.

Don't Hurl Stones, For They May Be Valuable Meteors

The next time you start to throw stones at windows, count ten first.

Those stones may be meteorites, and, if so, there is a fair chance that the Smithsonian Institution will buy them.

Thousands of meteorites are scattered over the United States, according to E. P. Henderson, in charge of the Smithsonian meteorite collection.

From this stock a steady stream of samples is sent the museum, along with many plain stones and cinders, Henderson said yesterday.

Among the 1,500 or 2,000 samples which probably will be sent the museum this year Henderson hopes to receive around 65 actual meteorites. The museum already has the largest and fastest growing meteorite collection in the world, with samples from 670 of the 1,200 known falls. The collection includes several meteorites weighing over half a ton and one in the shape of a ring, the only specimen of its kind known.

Slain Tenant Case Nears Jury Stage

The "landlord-tenant" slaying of Ray E. Childress, burly 35-year-old cab driver, will be placed in the hands of a jury in District Court late today, it was indicated yesterday.

Childress was slain when he battered down a door that Donald K. Stanton had nailed at the threshhold of the tiny Childress apartment, because of the alleged nonpayment of back rent of $4.50. Stanton testified he shot Childress only when he thought the latter was about to kill him. The shooting took place at 69 New York avenue northeast, October 2, 1936.

Defense attorneys are James A. O'Shea and J. H. Burnett, while William Hitz and Charles B. Murray represent the Government.

House Favors Small Claims Court for D.C.

Plan Nears Realization as Senate's Bill Wins Quick Approval

A small claims court, where debtor and creditor may meet in informal fashion and discuss their case in nonjudicial language, was almost an actuality for the District yesterday as the House approved a Senate bill.

Only Senate acceptance of the minor House amendment, exempting tenant and landlord cases, and the President's signature are needed to make the bill a law.

House approval came quickly and without a dissenting voice, although the District Bar Association had fought the measure before a sub-committee of the House District Committee.

The action marks another step toward realization of the dream of Judge Nathan Cayton, of Municipal Court, who almost single-handedly has sold the bill to the District and Congress.

Judge Cayton said yesterday that he probably will visit the New York and Chicago small claims court before the District unit is put in operation. He explained that no additional personnel or more money will be needed to finance the venture. Municipal Court judges will rotate on the assignment.

Besides handling claims of $50 or less without the customary judicial procedure, the small claims court would be empowered to act as conciliator in larger cases, provided both parties voluntarily request it.

As explained by the committee, the court "reduces expense by providing a minimum flat fee of $1, which may be waived for those unable to pay without being stigmatized as 'paupers,' obviating needless and costly continuances, and making it unnecessary to be represented by counsel, either to commence or defend a suit."

The House also passed a bill legalizing the operation of a commissary at the District Jail.

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, explained that Louis Haag, 80 years old, has operated the stand for the last 10 years by permission of the superintendent, but that the comptroller general had recently held that a special act was necessary for such an activity.

Rev. Elmer Cardey Will Go to Africa

The Rev. Elmer Cardey, veteran missionary for the Seventh Day Adventist Church, with his wife, will leave Baltimore shortly for Cape Town as missionary evangelist to South Africa.

2 Opera-Singing Bandits Wait 6 Hours for $606; Return $5

Patient Thugs Carol La Traviata, La Boheme, Il Trovatore, and Hear, But Don't Believe, That Crime Doesn't Pay.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Two patient bandits sang arias within earshot of the Metropolitan Opera House, received a lecture on honesty from a victim, stole $601 and tangled up traffic in Times Square today.

As far as Edward Jerome, 25, is concerned, they ruined opera for him forever. Beating time with revolvers for batons, they made him listen to Traviata, La Boheme and Il Trovatore for four solid hours.

All that time they were waiting for someone who could open the safe of the Economy Sandwich Shop executive office on the ninth floor of a building at Broadway and Forty-second street.

When the two gunmen first jammed pistols into Jerome's ribs at 10:30 a. m., he assured them he didn't know the combination.

"You look honest," said the first bandit. "I guess maybe you don't."

"We'll wait for the boss," decided the other bandit.

For a while they sat and looked at each other. Then the first bandit started singing. Then both bandits harmonized on Pagliacci. It went on and on.

Jerome censured the bandits for their life of crime.

"You can't get away with it," he assured them. "Remember, crime doesn't pay. What would your mothers say if they knew what you are doing?"

"It's too late now, pal," said one gunman. "We can't change. We met you too late."

So they sang some more opera.

At 2:30 p. m. the company manager, Joseph Stutz, 48, came back and walked into a revolver muzzle. Abandoning their singing, the bandits forced him to open the safe and remove $500. Then they took his pocketbook, containing $106, returning $5 when he complained of being penniless.

They bound their captives hand and foot and walked away.

Stutz wriggled over to a window and kicked out a pane. The glass rained down on pedestrians below. A traffic cop looked up, saw the foot sticking out of the ninth story window, and Times Square was jammed with police radio cars within five minutes.

Prisoner Admits Poisoning Food of Baltimore Family

Baltimore, Feb. 28 (AP).—Police Capt. John L. Carroll said tonight he had arrested a man who admitted poisoning food in the home of Otis Clarke, where four persons became violently ill last night after dinner.

It was the second time this year that illness followed dinner in the Clarke household.

The prisoner's name was not revealed, but Capt. Carroll said the man confessed placing acid in mustard and poison tablets in milk at the Clarke house on previous occasions.

The victims of the illness were treated by physicians and at a hospital and returned home. They are Clarke, 43, a truck driver; his wife, Mary, 41; her son, John W. Robertson, 16, and daughter, Lorraine T. Robertson.

Safe Looted of $700.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Colley Theater safe was robbed last night and $700 stolen. The robbery was apparently executed by an expert as there were no signs of damage to the safe.

12 Men Work 11th Day To Rescue Dog in Hole

Doubuque, Iowa, Feb. 28 (AP).—Twelve men worked through their eleventh consecutive day today trying to rescue a little fox terrier entombed in a fox hole. As night fell they believed they were nearing success. In day and night shifts the men have labored, discharging 110 sticks of dynamite and drilling through 17 feet of limestone.

The dog, "Spotty," a 5-year-old, 10-pound fox terrier, followed a fox into his hole at the Chester Baker farm near here a week ago Friday night.

Copeland Hints Marine Radical Hunt by G-Men

Merchant Marine Inquiry May Take Years, Senator Says.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation may be asked to investigate Communistic and other subversive activities in the American merchant marine when a special Senate committee appointed yesterday meets later in the week.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, one of six men named to the committee by Vice President Garner, said the question of using FBI agents was one of several that would be taken up at the meeting.

Besides Copeland, those appointed by Vice President Garner were Senators Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah; Vic Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio; Francis T. Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, and Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

Copeland said yesterday that, while the new inquiry grew out of the general hearing on new merchant marine legislation, it was to be pursued separately and might take "years."

"Obviously," Copeland said, "there must be assurance that the men who sail our ships are 100 per cent Americans. I believe that most of them are. But there are some leaders of maritime unions who are no enthusiastic citizens—if, indeed, they are citizens at all."

The special Senate committee has been granted $20,000 for the expenses of its inquiry.

FHA to Pay D.C. $2,925 to Settle Langston Taxes

Hazen Calls It 'Gift' Since U. S. Is Not Required to Pay Anything.

The Federal Government yesterday agreed to pay the District government $2,925 yearly for municipal services supplied to Langston, newest low-cost housing project completed by the United States Housing authority.

Officials for the housing authority had met with the District Commissioners to settle a yearly "lump-sum" payment to the District in lieu of taxes, since the Federal Government does not pay local taxes.

A provision in the housing act provides that the housing authority "may" pay a lump sum. Commenting on the deal, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said:

"It's a present to us; they didn't have to give us a cent."

The property, located at Twenty-fifth street and Benning road northeast, is exclusively for colored residents, having been constructed at a cost of $1,500,000.

It was explained that in other cities, where similar projects are undertaken, the municipalities themselves help to finance construction. In Washington the housing authority took over all financial arrangements from the WPA, which began the project.

Site of the development heretofore has been assessed at $76,600. Taxes on it have netted the District about $900 a year. Now, however, the District will supply police and fire protection, schools and other services.

It was pointed out, however, that the U. S. H. A. will pay water rent to the District and also charges for trash removal. The settlement has its own incinerators.

Maryland U. Plans Leave for Faculty

A sabbatical leave program for members of the faculty of the University of Maryland was announced yesterday at the first general faculty meeting in ten years.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president, told faculty members the board of regents adopted a program under which professors will receive full pay for a half-year of leave or half-pay for a full year while pursuing their studies. Members of the faculty will be eligible for sabbatical leave after seven years at the university.

Dr. Byrd said the regents had agreed to pay faculty members half-pay for one year in case of illness.

New Deal Policy Bars Recovery, Baruch Avers

Baruch

turbing assaults on business, either by some statutory change in the existing business pattern or a general Government hostility, or governmental competitive invasion of existing fields of private enterprise."

He declared he was in full accord with the views of his personal friend, President Roosevelt, that the national income should reach $100,000,000,000 a year, as compared with the present $67,500,000,000.

But he noted that "it is the combination of millions of cautions that holds back the spending and development which could do ten times more for re-employment and development than any Government action or all the spending for relief in any year of this depression."

"America Must Choose."

The 68-year-old financier, who retired from Wall Street in 1934, laid particular emphasis on his belief that "America must choose."

The choice to be made, he said, was "either the traditional profits system and the hope of gain" or "the new European ideas of state regulation and the fear of punishment."

"We can try either, but not both at the same time.

"If it became clear tomorrow that America has definitely chosen her traditional profit system, forces would be released that would rapidly hasten recovery and re-employment."

He hoped, he said, that the American system would not be "condemned in favor of unproved experiments going on in other and less liberal lands," and added that he regarded American civilization as "the one hope in a troubled world."

In repeatedly stressing the necessity of heeding natural laws, he noted the tendency to "go too far—to rush from the freezing at the ice of laissez faire to a burning at the fiery extreme of regulating everything." He had described "laissez faire" economics as the theory of unlimited competition, the survival of the fittest, or jungle law, and admitted that while this theory had made the country great in its days of expansion, it was outmoded by the loss of the frontier and the development of a machine civilization.

Between these two extremes he advocated a policy of moderate regulation, of adapting "our sails to the winds," indicating that the way out was not to try to regulate the "winds" but to harness them in such manner that man's course could be charted and regulated. He hailed Woodrow Wilson's wartime platform, that, "We must let alone what is being well done and administer that which is ill," as a "good guide" to a solution of present-day economic problems.

Would Modify Taxes.

He urged modification, but not repeal, of the undistributed surplus profits and capital gains taxes; a wage-hour law with adequate flexibility and reasonable differentials; eventual balancing of the budget, and a thorough, nonpolitical revamping of the entire tax structure to obtain the greatest possible revenue while permitting the widest possible encouragement of private business and industry to expand and develop new industries.

In this connection he remarked dryly: "The Treasury is no place for political Messiahs." Tax revision, he insisted, was "a public concern of pretty nearly the first magnitude," and added that he believed the tax revision bill, to be reported to the House today, "may be the leading economic event of our current history. If it indicates a move toward taking the shackles off our traditional economy and giving our profits system some leeway in which to work and solve our problems in accordance with that economy, it will be a tremendous force for recovery—both here and abroad. If, on the other hand, it continues the influences that have retarded our recent recovery, we may push ourselves and the world to lower levels from which it will be difficult for us or any other nation to rescue them."

Japanese Peril Furniture Trade, Senator Charges

By the United Press.

Senator Lewis D. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, last night declared that unless steps are taken to curb allegedly "unfair" practices by Japanese furniture manufacturers, the State of Washington's furniture market in the Hawaiian Islands may be lost.

In a letter to Commissioner James H. Moyle, of the United States Customs Bureau, he charged that Japanese manufacturers were shipping unfinished "knock-down furniture to the islands and billing it is "wooden parts" in order to pay only a 20 per cent duty istead of the 70 per cent duty on finished furniture.

"Furniture manufacturing has developed into a major industry in the State of Washington," Schwellenbach declared. "If this practice is allowed to continue, a large part of this business will be lost, for it is a well-known fact that American labor can not compete with cheap Japanese labor."

200 Seek 40 Jobs.

Lnychburg, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—Two hundred women were on hand to file applications for jobs with the Virginia Garment Co. when it opened its office here today. The concern will make uniforms and dresses. Forty women are to be employed at first, but the pay roll later will be increased to 100.

Financier Assails Present-Day Economic Thinking

Partial Text of Baruch's Remarks to Senate Committee

Bernard M. Baruch yesterday told the Senate Unemployment Committee in part:

"I have been among the first to urge that the lag of our economic and political systems behind the developing complexities and social necessities of modern life must be eliminated. I think I was as early as any to urge economic equality for agriculture, a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours, Federal assumption of a share of the cost of relief, especially by public works, the elimination of unfair trade practices, the principles of social security, and, in general, a point of view best expressed by Woodrow Wilson many years ago.

"In other words, I agree that our system needed revision, but I do not believe that it needs revolution, peaceful or otherwise.

"In the field of business economics, I sometimes wonder whether we have even stopped to discover what the true governing natural law is. We are blundering among three separate and diverse ideas: (1) complete Government operation of business as in the Fascist states; (2), a recognition that our economy has fallen naturally into great groupings and a determination to use them to our maximum advantage, regulating them to protect the public from exploitation and to prevent abuses, and (3), unlimited compettiion.

"What is unlimited laissez faire? It is more or less than a complete surrender to—the ancient animalistic natural law of survival of the fittest? Is it a doctrine more enlightened than that man can't adapt the law of the winds in sailing the sea? I think not and yet I truly believe that it was the most effective doctrine in developing a country of continental extent, of boundless resource and unlimited for individual initiative.

"But that era ended at about the end of the nineteenth centruy. In the industrial East, at least, individual initiative had begun to merge into corporate collectivism.

"As the years of the twentieth century advanced, our new industrial engine became marvelously efficient. The motors of mass and machine production raced merrily in times of ascending activity to give employment and increased enjoyment of its products to all. But the engine had neither governor nor flywheel. It disgorged tons of output with little regard to the power of its human parts—which were its only markets—to consume its products. When the channels of production clogged with undigested surplus the whole machinery stalled. Its human cogs and ratchets had lost their individual self-sufficiency. When their jobs were gone, they could no longer trek westward. Not only had the old free West canished, but in their specialization they had lost power to conquer it if it had remained.

"The peakes of prosperity became higher and steeper, but the valleys of depression grew deeper and wider. The old cushions for depression—new horizons of free land—were gone. But we took little heed of this vast change. We clung to the doctrine of unlimited competition and individual laissez-faire long after the condjtions to which jt was suited had vanished.

"The crash of 1929 and the lean years that followed it at last thoroughly awakened this Nation and the world to the startling necessity to temper the raw doctrine of laissez faire with the age-old lesson of our race—that we must not lie down dumbly under the destructive effect of natural laws.

"If anywhere within our ingenuity there are means to prevent abuses of private economic power and the recurrence of these wide swings—these peaks too high and these valleys too deep—can we be satisfied to sweat it out under the ancient doctrine of laissez-faire? Every year it becomes more certain that we cannot leave the material welfare of 130,000,000 people to the vagaries of every economic wind that blows.

"To activate our economy we can rely on the profits system and the hope of gain, or we can try the new European ideas of state regulation and the fear of punishment. We can try either but we can't try both at the same time. The hope of gain demands more freedom from political domination than is consistent with any fear of punishment.

"If it became clear tomorrow that America has definitely chosen her traditional profits system, forces would be released that would rapidly hasten recovery and reemployment.

"There is a limit in laying burdens on any economy beyond which you get a less rather than greater return by reason of the multiplicity of drains. It is called the law of diminishing returns.

"I realize that political officials must do things politically. I know that it is just as cogent for a politician to say of a businessman 'he never had to win an election' as for a businessman to say of a politician "he never had to meet a pay roll.'

"Furthermore, industry must help eradicate its own abuses in the field of finance, public utilities, speculation and relations with labor and the consuming public. It has not done its full share there. If it does not help co-operatively, the job will have to be done by government alone, and far less well.

Our Tax Problem.

"We have never approached our tax problem from the question, 'how can we get the greatest possible encouragement to production and business activity?' We have approached it recently with what seems like a precisely reverse purpose. And yet in increased business and production alone lies the solution of our unemployment problem, as well as of our budget problems. I not only agree with the President that we need a national income of $100,000,000,000 a year, but I think it is well within our possibilities. But whether we get it or not depends altogether on a wise readjustment of our tax structure. The power to tax is the power to destroy. If you destroy the gains-incentive, you destroy both activity and revenue. Our need is for both.

"I agree completely with so much of the principle of the undistributed profits tax as prevents tax avoidance through the unproductive accumulation of surplus or the accumulation of surplus beyond the needs of prudent business administration. But that can easily be attacked without paralyzing the expansion of old business and the creation of new industries.

"One of our principal problems is technological unemployment and the woeful lag of acticity in the capital goods industries. That is where our greatest pool of unemployment resides. That there has been a vast replacement of men by machines is beyond argument. The only possible offset to that is the creation of new industries and the expansion of old ones.

"The combined influence of high and unreasonable capital gains and unwise undistributed taxes has almost stopped the development of new enterprices. Financing of new developments is a very risky business. It usually takes a long time and a period of consecutive losses before there are any profits. Under the capital gains tax the Government in effect is saying: "If you lose, you lose it all. If you succeed, we take most of it." Nobody wants to take such risks.

"Another way to build a new industry is by plowing back its profits. Under the undistributed profits tax that way is also almost completely closed.

"The third and last way is to build by borrowing, but that avenue is also barred if the borrowing must be paid from profits.

"Considering all three effects together these taxes close all three approaches toward a solution of technological unemployment which I think is our greatest unemployment problem. Our prime necessity right now—the development of new industries—is slowed tremendously by these twin taxes. I think we should exempt small industries and new industries during development and also exempt all expenditures of any corporation for expansion of capital facilities or development of new products or for payment of debt incurred for the same.

"The regular income tax structure should also be given a thorough overhauling to discover its maximum revenue-producing efficiency under the law of diminishing returns.

"In our great need for revenue, the tax laws should be designed for increasing employment and revenue and not for revenge, punishment, hatred, regulation or advancement of any social theory. It is my belief that if they were scientifically revised for the two purposes I mentioned—maximum revenue and maximum recovery—we could make a very great advance.

"There is another field that merits most careful study. I refer to death duties. Before I go further, let me say I am not for their repeal. It is a great deflationary influence. I am not interested in preserving any unearned wealth to a younger generation, my own or others.' But I do think our process of suddenly breaking up enterprises and turning them into instant cash, regardless of conditions, should be studied to find a way to prevent the tremendous retardation it imposes on recovery.

"Revision of Federal and State tax structures for maximum business activity and at the same time maximum revenue on the law of diminishing returns requires study. It is a matter of public concern of pretty nearly first magnitude. If there is such a thing as science in government, this is where it should be applied. The Treasury is no place for the theories of political Messiahs.

"I repeat with the greatest earnestness that I believe unemployment can be solved only by a proper readjustment of Federal policy and the tax structure for maximum business turnover and activity, both nationally and internationally. In this way you will get the greatest Government receipts, the greatest amount of ernment expenditure isn't the way to cure unemployment. There is only one way to do that—full priemployment and the greatest sum of money to be used for relief and necessary social work.

"As long as employment lags, we must spend for relief but Govvate expenditure for consumption and investment in the normal proportions as between capital and consumers' goods.

"It is the combination of millions of cautions that holds back the spending and development which could do ten times more for re-employment than any Government action or all the spending for relief in any year of this depression.

"Of course, all this depends on national policy. If it remains what recently it has appeared to be, there is no hope of re-employment and substantial recovery. If it could be changed along the lines I have tried to indicate, I believe that we would have a rapid and immediate rise in all economic indexes.

"I have recently heard some public men reproach business for the alleged failure to step forward and employ the millions of jobless, and intimate that if business doesn't, Government will. In addition to being illogical and unfair, that raises hopes that can never be realized and expresses a promise to unfortunates that never can be fulfilled.

"I say it with regret, but I would be less than candid if I failed to express my opinion that unemployment is now traceable more directly to Government policy than to anything that business could or should do, and that if those policies are not changed, neither business nor Government can ever solve this most terrible of all our problems.

Well Done, Says Roosevelt of Air Forts' Trip

President Is 'Enthusiastic' on Hearing Report of Col. Olds.

Lieut. Col. Robert Olds, who commanded the goodwill flight of six Army bombing planes to Buenos Aires, Argentina, told President Roosevelt about the trip yesterday and after the White House interview described him as "very enthusiastic" about its success.

Previously Mr. Roosevelt had extended through Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring his official congratulations to Olds and the 48 officers and men he commanded. The President's brief message said, "Well done, F. D. R."

The commendation, the War Department said, would be entered on the efficiency records of the flyers.

Asks Questions.

Woodring and Olds reported Mr. Roosevelt asked several questions about the flight, especially about the route and weather conditions.

The flight commander delivered to the President a letter from Roberto M. Ortiz, new president of Argentina. Olds had carried a similar note of greeting and goodwill from Mr. Roosevelt on his trip to Buenos Aires.

Before calling at the White House, Olds told reporters the flight was made "over the weather." At times the planes went up to 22,000 feet to avoid adverse weather conditions, he said.

Record Established.

Completion of the flight at Langley Field, Va., established a nonstop record on the last leg of the trip from the Panama Canal Zone, the Associated Press reported.

Olds conferred with Secretary Woodring and Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, before going to the White House accompanied by Woodring.

He praised the men who made the flight with him and said, "each navigated individually. It was excellent training and they came through magnificently. Practically the entire flight was made by celestial navigation. We had only two checking points, one near Panama and another at St. Helena, west of Guayaquil."

Naval Parley in London.

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—Naval experts of the United States, Britain and France will meet informally here tomorrow to consider Japan's note of February 12 refusing to divulge her naval construction plans in response to requests from the three powers.

Capt. Russell Willson, Naval Attache of the embassy, will represent the United States at the meeting at the foreign office, which will be the first meeting of the three powers' naval representatives since Japan's refusal was received.

The powers face the question whether they shall agree to abandon the 35,000-ton and other limits of the London pact if convinced that the Japanese are planning to build ships larger and better armed than those envisaged by the treaty, to which she refused to adhere.

Spy Plot Against Colonel's Life Fails

Associated Press Photos

Col. H. W. T. Eglin (left), commander of Fort Trotten and Sixty-second Coast Artillery, was marked for death by a spy trio seeking military secrets for a foreign power. The spies were to lure Eglin to a New York hotel to steal certain secret documents and then kill him. As a result of spy activities, Col. Thomas Hanley (right) Mitchell Field commandant, has thrown a heavy guard around the field to prevent further thefts of Air Corps secrets.

Frederick Walks As Bus Company Gives Up Ghost

Frederick, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—Frederick's working population prepared tonight to ride to work in taxicabs or walk.

All scheduled transportation in this city of 15,000 ceased at 11 o'clock tonight when the Potomac Edison Co. ordered its two buses off the streets because of unprofitable operation.

Trolley cars were taken from the streets last August to make way for the buses.

Workers and shoppers had a choice of walking to work or riding in the numerous cabs which charge 20 cents a trip to any section of this historic city.

Man Severely Burned Touching Transformer

Shocked unconscious when his body came in contact with a high voltage electric transformer in the roalroad yards at Second and I streets northeast yesterday, Carl Warner, 35, 1717 Trinidad avenue northeast, was in Emergency Hospital last night.

Employed by the Washington Terminal Co., Warner was severely burned on his hands and feet by the electricity. Fire rescue squad workers administered first aid and Warner was taken to the hospital. Doctors said his condition was not serious.

Man, Victim of Gas, Revived by Firemen

Artificial respiration, administered by members of the Fire Rescue Squad, probably saved the life of Joseph W. Poston, 38, of 1836 A street southeast, yesterday.

Poston was found unconscious in the gas-filled kitchen of his home yesterday by a neighbor, revived by the firemen and taken to Casualty Hospital. His condition was held not serious.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Chamber Music Society presents the Pro Musica Quartet (Frederick Dvonch, Jeno Sevely, Ralph Hersh and William Brennand) and Sylvia Meyer, harpist, in Phillips Memorial Gallery.

Chaikovski's D major quartet was the principal work played yesterday afternoon by the Pro Musica Quartet at the Washington Chamber Music Society's last "candlelight" concert of the season. Frederick Dvonch and his colleagues, who have become increasingly consentient during their four months of association, gave it an agreeable reading, giving particular care to the lyrical slow movement.

This famous "Andante Cantabile" is one of the curiosities of music, sharing with Handel's "Ombra ma fu" an adaptability to all kinds of transcriptions and to the most varied uses. Its powe of evoking kovski was writing his opera, "Uemotional response testifies to the vitality of folk music. When Chaidine," in the summer of 1869, he heard a carpenter singing outside his window, and the song, "Vanya sat on a sofa and smoked his pipe," haunted him until he utilized it in his first quartet a year later.

The novelty on the program was a short fantasia for string foursome by Mr. Dvonch. A work of the composer's student days, it reveals poetic imagination combined with experimental freedom in harmony. It was followed by the slow movement from the Debussy quartet.

Sylvia Meyer gave an admirable performance of the solo part in Debussy's "Danse Sacree et Danse Profane" as arranged by Carlos Salzedo. Her technical competence and her sound musicianship make her one of our best American harpists.

Funeral Rites Set Today for Mrs. Hechinger

Soical Welfare Leader, D. C. Native, Died at 80 on Sunday.

Funeral services for Mrs. Bertha Hechinger, widow of Jonas W. Hechinger, who died Sunday following a protracted illness, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today from her residence, 2735 Connecticut avenue northwest.

Mrs. Hechinger was 80 years old. She was a native of Washington and had lived here all her life. In her childhood she took part in the celebration honoring soldiers returning from the Civil War, and was married 54 years ago to Mr. Hechinger, who died in 1921.

Mrs. Hechinger was widely recognized as a leader in social welfare work and until her later years, took an active part in nearly every local effort to promote aid to the underprivileged.

Maj. Emanuel Lulley, great-grandfather of Mrs. Hechinger, came to this country in 1851 with Kossuth, Hungarian patriot. Her father and grandfather were among the 11 founders of the present Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Surviving Mrs. Hechinger is a daughter, Mrs. Harry Roller; a son, Sidney L. Hechinger; three grandchildren, John and Lois Hechinger and Mrs. Daniel Randolph Conn, daughter of Mrs. Roller.

Economy Aims Discarded in Reorganization

Virginia, opened its assault on the bill. Byrnes agreed to strike one entire section of the measure to partially mollify critics. The section would have given the President power to decide which Federal jobs are "policy determining" and make appointments to fill them, with Senate confirmation.

Byrnes also agreed to accept an amendment by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, to set up one or more boards of review in each department to hear appeals by employes on efficiency ratings.

Byrnes' admission that reorganization economies may be slight came after he had chided Senators Byrd, Bailey, of North Carolina, and Clark, of Missouri (reorganization bill critics) for supporting the economy act of 1933 which carried broad reorganizing powers for the President.

Bailey contended economy was the objective of the 1933 act, and asked if that was the primary purpose of the present measure. Byrnes said the only way to save large amounts is to "stop appropriating money for agencies."

Points to Pensions Relief.

Pointing to large recurring items for pensions, roads funds and relief, he said he would "take off his hat to the President" if he could save 1 per cent of the national budget—$80,000,000.

Senator Byrd, who may take the floor today to answer the South Carolinian, will contend the reorganization bill actually will increase Government spending.

"Instead of economies, we will be very fortunate if the bill doesn't cost $100,000,000 additional," commented the Virginian off the floor. He said large new costs are entailed in the proposed new Department of Welfare, the proposed National Resources Planning Board, and "authority to add experts and consultants without regard to the budget."

Critics Ask Questions.

Throughout Byrnes' presentation of the case for reorganization he was closely questioned by Senatorial critics of wide powers granted under the Administration bill.

The controversy was shelved for the day only when Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, called up the $250,000,000 relief deficiency report for final action. Before adoption of the relief conference report, the Senate rescinded earlier action lifting monthly limitations on spending imposed by the so-called Woodrum amendment. Adams explained that House conferees insisted on the restriction. He said it would not materially affect allocations under the new relief fund, and recommended Senate withdrawal. The conference report was speedily approved, with this change, and sent back to the House for action.

Senate business moved swiftly, as the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill was next called up and approved before the evening recess. An attempt by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, to recommit the $1,402,000,000 bill for a 10 per cent slash was defeated. King said efforts to cut appropriations were "hopeless." He said efforts to balance the budget have been abandoned "and now the talk is only of more expenditures."

Pledges Recalled.

Foes of the President's pigeonholed court plan were prominent in the attack on reorganization proposals, as Byrd, Bailey, Clark, Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts; Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and George (Democrat), of Georgia, cross-questioned Byrnes.

Bailey recalled 1932 Democratic pledges to cut Federal spending 25 per cent, and said the President had not economized under 1933 economy act powers. Wheeler said Congress would confess incompetence by turning reorganization powers over to the President and declared "we might as well turn all functions over to the executive branch, as has been done in Germany, Italy and Russia."

Walsh, seeking to prevent abolition of the Civil Service Commission, complained the bill would enable the President to take employes out of their civil service classifications.

George said he would fight to prevent transfer of the Forest Service from the Agriculture to the Interior Department, which the President might do under merger powers.

Purse Strings Involved.

Byrd directed his inquiries at proposed abolition of the Comptroller General's Office, and division of the present authority between the Budget Bureau and a proposed "Auditor General." The Virginian believes it would loosen Congressional control over Treasury purse strings.

Byrnes insisted creation of an Auditor General, solely responsible to Congress, would merely apply audit methods now used by large business organizations. To complaints that the official would have power only of "post audit," the South Carolinian replied that the General Accounting Office at the present time passes in advance on items of expenditure only when departments ask for a ruling, or on approximately 3½ per cent of the accounts.

frame house at 1020 Summer road southeast. Starting in an upper floor room the flames spread to the shingled roof. No one was injured.

Trees were down in streets throughout the city: The 900 block of First street southeast; 300 block, C street southeast; Eckington place and Q street northeast; Broad Branch road and Brandywine street northwest, and other points. Traffic was held up for brief periods.

Under a deceptively bright sun, the wind held steadily from the northwest throughout the day, several times shooting the meters at the Weather Bureau to gale marks. The highest recorded velocity was 48 miles an hour. Temperatures rose from 21 at 7:30 a. m. to 29 at 2:30 p. m., and then started back down toward an expected minimum for last night of 15 degrees. This mark was the lowest of the winter, two degrees under the coldest recorded so far, on December 12.

Weather officials said today would be fair, with moderate winds, and warnings were continued last night slowly rising temperatures. Storm north of New York City to Eastport, Me.

Low water in the Potomac and Anacostia rivers was attributed to the heavy wind by Maj. W. A. Luplow, of the Army Engineer Corps. The river was about 5 feet below its normal high. Acting Lieut. C. Humphries, of the harbor police, said it was the lowest tide in years.

Harbor police helped to right a house boat which was tilted on a mud bank in the Eastern branch. Rising waters had started to fill one end of the boat when police brought help.

Among several windows smashed was a large plate glass in a beauty parlor at 4931 Georgia avenue northwest. It toppled into the sidewalk, narrowly missing several persons. In the District Building, a window slammed down behind Commissioner Hazen during a conference on relief. The crash brought the Commissioner to his feet with the query "Am I shot?"

Aviators were both helped and hindered by the winds. Pennsylvania air officials reported their planes flew from Pittsburg to Washington in 45 minutes, with the return flight taking two hours. The normal time is an hour and 10 minutes.

Eastern Airlines canceled several flights between Washington and New York. Larger planes coming into Washington were forced to land at Bolling Field instead of the Washington Airport. Through planes from New York to Miami went over Washington without their usual stop.

Miss Bauer, stenographer at the registrar's office, University of Maryland, was caught in a tangle of telephone poles and wires, while driving to work. She saw one pole tottering, speed past it, and then stopped as she saw the next pole sway and crash into the road. The wires fell over her car. She remained trapped in the car until a student found that the power had been shut off.

Several classes at the university were dismissed when lights went off.

Five Alexandria fishermen told last night of a 12-hour bout with the cold, after losing an 800-pound haul of fish. They were Harvey Arnold, 24; Robert Arnold, jr., 21; Edward Monroe, 24; Wade Poland, 27, and Arthur McKellingan, 20.

Caught by the windstorm at the close of a seining expedition, they loaded their fish into a rowboat and boarded their open "gillboat" to start home, towing the catch behind. The rowboat sank, their motor failed, and they spent the night on a wind-swept beach with only a driftwood fire and a small piece of tarpaulin for warmth.

After daylight they succeeded in starting the motor, and reached their homes in Alexandria shortly before noon. The spray had frozen their clothes to their bodies. It had frozen McKelligan's hair to his head. They were welcomed by all 16 members of the Arnold family, from 13-year-old Walter Johnson Arnold, to 73-ytar-old Robert Arnold, his father.

$20,000 Loss in Fire.

All volunteer fire departments in Montgomery County, Md., were called out by field, woods and chimney fires, some several times. They found difficulty in battling the wind-fanned blazes.

Most serious damage was almost complete destruction of the home at Redlands, near Gaithersburg, of Brockett Muir, recently remodeled and stocked with antique furniture valued at $5,000. Total damage was estimated at $20,000.

A field and woods fire swept across 100 acres on the property of Paul Sabine, at Bowie. Sixty acres at Clarksburg also were burned and a chimney fire caused $300 damage to the home of Al G. Morningstar at Barnsville.

Arts

fearful of crowds, welcomed the situation. Both testified swiftly in a low voice and left hurriedly and with relief.

It was Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who pointed out the "dangers" in the bill. When Roy Harris, New York composer, asserted creative music would benefit "tremendously" if musicians could be assured a definite Government-paid salary of about $30 a week, he shouted:

"What! Why I used to be a tin-horn clarinet-player myself, and something of a song-and-dance man, too!"

"If when I was tooting the clarinet in the village band—if someone had said to me that I could get $30 a week by calling myself a musician I'd have given up puddling in a steel mill and be tooting my horn today."

When Harris said the swarm of embryo musicians in the country shouldn't be allowed to handicap Federal aid to music, Davis exclaimed:

"From my own experience I'd say you'd have quite a few applicants. There are lots of Welshmen in Pennsylvania where I come from, and you know every Welshman thinks he can sing."

Miss Cowl, star of "First Lady" and many other hits, a brilliant red flop-brimmed hat on her black hair, huge silver fox draped over her black coat, told the committee that "thousands of actors are figuratively clinging to the window sill by their finger tips. Only Federal aid can really save them."

Miss Gish, demure under a brown witch-hat, looped on by a chin-strap, and wearing a beaver coat over a sand-colored sports dress, stressed the "magnificent" work of the Federal Theater Project of the WPA in her brief testimony.

Meredith, president of the Actors Equity Association and prominent young stage star, and Welles, dynamic young actor who graduated from the WPA theater to eminence as a producer in his own right in the new Mercury Theater, were emphatic in their approval of the bill.

Meredith admitted that "the arts are not as important as feeding the stomach, but are the very next thing to it . . . A nation which sings, paints, dances and attends the theater is a better nation."

Welles said: "A man can get along without the theater, but a people can't . . . We have American music when everybody sings, but we don't have anything when everybody sits home and listens to the radio . . . A few years ago the movies took our best talent. Now the most significant people are working for the stage . . . The movies have had a strangle-hold on entertainment. A few years ago, when I was with Katharine Cornell, presenting Shakespeare on tour, the movie men had such a monopoly on things in Richmond, Va., that we had to get a special permit from the Governor of the State to present our play."

Dreiser, muffled to the ears in a bright green woolen scarf that he wore inside his suit coat, told the committee shyly that "writers aren't badly off these days. It's the theater people, the painters and those artists without great markets, who need help to get some kind of footing. But it ought to be selective help—to weed out the people who never will have anything but the desire to be artists.

The poets of America have not been able to "get to first base" with Congress, Earl A. Cuevas complained bitterly.

Court

no dissenting opinions, but Justices Cardozo and Reed did not participate.

But the court split, 5 to 4, in deciding that Federal Judge Ferdinand Geiger, of Milwaukee, Wis., exceeded his authority in granting an injunction against picketing of five stores operated by E. G. Shinner & Co., which said it was on peaceful terms with its employes. Justices Butler and McReynolds dissented. Reed and Cardozo did not participate.

Although the District Court and the Court of Appeals in the picketing case held no dispute existed, and the company said workers were not dissatisfied and were not union members, the Supreme Court ordered the litigation returned to the lower court for further proceedings.

Holds Court Erred.

"The District Court erred in granting an injunction in the absence of findings which the Norris-LaGuardia act (of 1932) makes prerequisites to the exercise of jurisdiction," said Justice Roberts for the majority.

"The District Court made none of the required findings save as to irreparable injury and lack of remedy at law. It follows that in issuing the injunction it exceeded its jurisdiction."

The case turned on construction of "labor disputes" under the Norris-LaGuardia act limiting court powers to issue injunctions in labor disputes. The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's local, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, had demanded the company require employes to become members of the union. The company notified employes they were free to join, but declined to force the to do so. Then picketing began by nonemployes, who were members of the union. Judge Geiger granted an injunction on the grounds that a labor dispute did not exist under terms of the Norris-LaGuardia act.

Dissenting Opinion.

In their dissenting opinion, Justices Butler and Stone agreed with the lower courts that there was "no 'labor dispute' within the meaning of the Norris-LaGuardia act."

"The case is a simple one," said Butler. "Respondent's employes had no connection with the union, and were unwilling to have any. The union, being unable to persuade the employes to assent to its wishes in that regard, undertook to subjugate them to its will by coercing an unlawful interference with their freedom of action on the part of the employer. If that is a 'labor dispute,' destructive of the historical power to intervene, then the Norris-LaGuardia acts attempts to legalize an arbitrary and alien state of affairs wholly at variance with those principles of constitutional liberty by which the exercise of despotic power hitherto has been curbed."

In the Greyhound Bus Lines cases, the companies contended the labor board exceeded its authority in forcing abandonment of a company union without designating another organization to bargain collectively for the workers.

The question before the court was whether the Labor Board, in addition to ordering employers to cease violations of the labor act, can require them to withdraw all recognition of the company union and post notices to that effect.

The company said the case has become "moot" because employes have selected bargaining representatives since the board order was issued. But Stone said an order does not become moot "because it is obeyed or because changing circumstances indicate that the need for it may be less than when made."

In the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines case, Justice Stone, speaking for the court, said the company "by unfair labor practices" had "succeeded in establishing a company union so organized that it is incapable of functioning as a bargaining representative of employes."

Stone conceded there "are situations in which the board would not be warranted in concluding that there was any occasion for withdrawal of an existing union before an election by employes, even though it had ordered an employer to cease unfair labor practices."

Bargaining Thwarted.

But he said that "in view of all the circumstances, the board could have thought that continued recognition of the association would serve as a means of thwarting the policy of collective bargaining by enabling the employer to induce adherence of employes to the association in the mistaken belief that it was truly representative and afforded an agency for collective bargaining, and thus to prevent self-organization."

In another ruling watched with interest by Federal tax draftsmen, the court yesterday held the salary received by State employes engaged in liquidating State banks or insurance companies is subject to a Federal income tax.

Narrow in its range, the decision did not settle the question of whether strictly State salaries can be taxed by the Federal Government. It decided only that the Government may legally tax that portion of the income of public officials, such as bank conservators, which comes from corporate assets and not from State funds.

The litigation involved the Federal Government's effort to collect tax from attorneys and others on compensation received for services rendered in the liquidation of insolvent corporations by a State officer proceeding under State laws.

In upholding the Government's right to collect in such cases, Justices McReynolds pointed out "the compensation of the taxpayers was paid from corporate assets—not from funds belonging to the State."

"No one of them was an officer of the State in the strict sense of that term," McReynolds ruled. "The business about which they were employed was not one utilized by the State in the discharge of her essential governmental duties. The corporations in liquidation were private enterprises; their funds were the property of private individuals."

Woman Changes Mind in Channel Plunge; Is Saved

After plunging into Washington Channel at Hains Point yesterday, Mrs. Barbara Holmes, 28, of 303 O street southwest, changed her mind about drowning herself and desperately clung to the seawall until harbor police dragged her to safety.

Mrs. Holmes was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she was treated for shock and exposure and then sent home.

Tom Doerer, jr., manager of the West Potomac golf course, and Wayne Owens, an employe of the West Potomac course, were driving through the park when they saw the young woman clamber over the rail. They rushed to the East Potomac clubhouse, telephoned harbor police, and returned to the seawall with Alfred Thomas, manager of the course. They saw Mrs. Holmes' coat floating down the river, Thomas said, and then heard her screaming "I don't want to die!"

Before the men were able to pull her out, a police boat came to the rescue.

Mrs. Holmes' husband, George M. Holmes, is a guard at Lorton Reformatory. She has a 10-year-old son by a previous marriage.

Rhea Will Support Barkley in Race

By the Associated Press.

Thomas S. Rhea, of Russellville, Ky., unsuccessful candidate for Governor against the incumbent, A. B. Chandler, said after a conference with President Roosevelt yesterday he would support Senator Alben W. Barkley in the coming Senatorial primary against Gov. Chandler.

Rhea, who was chairman of the Kentucky highway commission under Gov. Ruby Laffoon, was accompanied to the White House by Attorney General Cummings. Rhea said Gov. Chandler had sought an appointment with him and that he had conferred with the Governor last Monday at Nashville, Tenn.

DALE CARNEGIE

Author of "How to Win Friends and Influence People"

Dale Carnegie has trained more business men to talk effectively than any other living man. During the past 26 years more than 20,000 men and women have profited by his courses in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, London and Paris. He has trained some of the most famous men in the nation. His latest book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," sold more copies during its first year of publication than any other non-fiction book in all history. Articles about Dale Carnegie and the significance of his work appeared in the American Magazine, January, 1932; Readers' Digest, July, 1935, and in the Saturday Evening Post, August 14, 1937.

An exhaustive study was made at Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, to determine the causes of business success. As a result, it was declared that about 85% of success in business is due, not to superior knowledge, but to superior personality and the superior ability to influence others. The whole purpose of this course is to develop that ability. REMEMBER: YOU ARE WELCOME. 2400 16th ST. N.W. TONIGHT, TUESDAY, MARCH 1st. Come at 6 o'clock and have dinner with the class. Or, if you prefer, come to the regular class session at 8. No cost, except for dinner.

Japanese Army Claims Crossing Of Yellow River

50,000 Chinese in Shansi Held Surrounded West of Linfen.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Mar. 1.—The vanguard of the Japanese army smashing along the Peiping-Hankow Railway toward China's provisional capital in Hankow has fought its way across the Yellow River, according to unconfirmed Japanese reports today.

The crossing, effected between Chengchow and Meng-Hsien, followed Japanese victories to the northwest, where three other Japanese armies are battering more than 200,000 Chinese soldiers in the Yellow River triangle northeast of Sian-fu, capital of Shensi Province, in an effort to consolidate their conquest of North China.

The Japanese occupation of Linfen, provisional capital of Shansi Province, was said to have sealed the fate of the Chinese armies in this region.

Japanese claimed 50,000 Chinese soldiers, chiefly Shansi provincials, "positively were surrounded" west of Linfen and that Japanese columns were in position to crush the strongholds of the former Chinese Communist armies in the areas west of the north branch of the Yellow River between Sian-fu and the famous Chinese "Red Capital" at Yennan-fu.

It was indicated, however, that the North China operations would require "some weeks longer" and that the Japanese drive on Hankow might be delayed until next month.

Other developments in the war included:

Foreign diplomats in Shanghai told the United Press it seemed probable Britain either has or soon will effect an agreement with Japan in line with the announced policy of British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

They believed the "deal" would be kept until the war ends and that Britain would contniue selling limited quantities of munitions to China as long as China has money to pay for them, "since this is purely a commercial proposition."

Avoid U. S. Bund, Germans Ordered

when American Legion members broke up a German-American Bund meeting.

Ambassador Dieckhoff, in his call on Secretary Hull yesterday, said the order issued by his government would apply to between 400,000 and 500,000 German citizens in the United States. The order, issued through the German news bureau in Berlin and made public by Dieckhoff, follows:

"On account of numerous inquiries being received from German citizens living in the United States, the German government reiterates that German citizens must not belong to the Amerika-Deutsche Volksbund or to possible substitute organizations of that kind.

"German citizens who in ignorance of this standing order have become members of the Amerika-Deutsche Volksbund or the so-called Prospective Citizens League must resign from these organizations at once."

The Prospective Citizens League, it was explained, is made up of Germans who have taken out their first citizenship papers. Under the terms of the order they must withdraw as members.

An attache of the Amerika-Deutsche Volksbund headquarters in New York yesterday told the Associated Press that the order would not change the membership of the organization.

"There are no German citizens in the Volksbund," he said, "and as for the Prospective Citizens League only persons who already have taken out at least their first American citizenship papers can belong to that."

Asked if barring members who only hold first papers would decrease the size of the organization, he answered, "It would not affect one in a hundred."

Schuschnigg, in a long conference with Seyss-Inquart today, was understood to have given the minister of interior straightforward orders for "pacifying" his Nazi followers in Styria.

Physical Trainer New Tutor for Quintuplets

Callander, Ont., Feb. 28 (Canadian Press).—The Dionne quintuplets, 3 years and 9 months old today, have a new tutor for a new phase of their training.

Miss Norah Rousselle, of Renfrew, Ont., who has specialized in physical training, music and rhythmic dancing, was installed yesterday in the place of Miss Claire Tremblay, who helped them from awkward babyhood to little girlhood.

Army Planes Hunt Flier Missing in Philippines

Manila, Feb. 28 (AP).—Bert Hall, of Tucson, Ariz., was unreported tonight 12 hours after he hopped off from Manila for Paracale, Camarines Norte Province, on a regular flight in a Philippines aerial taxi plane. He carried no passengers. Four United States Army planes searched for two hours, but because of bad weather deferred further flights until dawn.

London, Paris Discuss Asking Il Duce to Help Guard Austria

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 28.—Britain and France are pursuing secret diplomatic negotiations aimed at the possibility of enlisting Italian aid to safeguard Austrian independence.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, faced with truculent opposition in Commons, however, was reported to be still undecided how far he could go along with the French demands for action to halt Nazi inroads in Austria.

As one step toward aiding Austria, the prime minister was believed anxious to bring Germany into line through a four-power pact with France, Italy and Britain that would limit her central European ambitions.

Today Chamberlain told Commons Britain could take no official action under present conditions as no treaties were broken by the Berchtesgaden conference between Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg.

British concessions to Italy in the forthcoming friendship negotiations at Rome might, however, drive a wedge into the Rome-Berlin axis. Austria reported today that Premier Mussolini had given Schuschnigg his guarantee that Austria would remain independent.

One such British concession would likely be recognition of Italy's Ethiopian conquest, long a sore point in relations between the two countries. Four more nations agreed today to recognize the conquest and Belgium indicated she was ready to take the same step.

The Balkan entente's action ranged Greece, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Turkey alongside Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Albania, insurgent Spain, Japan, Manchukuo and Yemen.

An official communique in Rome announced today that Hitler would visit Italy during the first two weeks of May as "Fuehrer and chancellor" and would be lodged in the royal palace.

Meanwhile, Chamberlain's choice of Viscount Halifax as foreign secretary succeeding Anthony Eden, received a hearty vote of confidence tonight in the House of Commons.

Opposition attacks against the peer who is destined to play a leading role in Chamberlain's planned European peace negotiations were smothered under a vote of 226 to 99 in favor of the government.

Davenport's Funeral Today; Royal Dentist

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP).—Funeral services for Dr. William Slocum Davenport, sr., 69, American dentist, artist and friend of Belgian royalty, will be held tomorrow at his estate, Les Rochers, in suburban Malmaison. He died Saturday of a heart attack. He was born at Binghamton, N. Y., and had practiced in Paris for 47 years. He was dentist to the Belgian royal family and for his services was made a Knight of the Order of Leopold.

French Cabinet Nears Crisis on Cost of Living

Senate and Deputies Deadlocked on Wage Adjustment Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 28.—Chautemps' cabinet was threatened tonight by a deadlock between the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies over how closely the French workingman's salary should be tied to the cost of living.

The life of the government was staked on a compromise. But neither branch of parliament appeared willing to make concessions on the first of two bills designed to replace the arbitration law and collective contracts expiring at midnight tonight.

The principal point of difference was over a change the senate made in the measure yesterday despite the premier's warning that such action might block agreement with the Chamber of Deputies and force his government to resign.

As approved by the senate, the bill authorizes an adjustment of workers' wages every six months in the event living costs increase 10 per cent. The chamber previously had passed a similar measure fixing 5 per cent as the living cost increase at which wages would be readjusted.

The chamber labor committee quickly rejected the senate amendment.

The powerful General Confederation of Labor approved the measure as passed by the chamber.

Catholics Protest New Mexican Peril

Mexico City, Feb. 28 (AP).—Dispatches from Orizaba, Vera Cruz State, told today of a huge demonstration by Catholics caused by reports that state authorities had ordered detention of Father Jose Maria Flores, a leading figure in last February's "peaceful uprising."

Officials denied planning to arrest the priest, but Catholics left guards at his home after a big protest demonstration yesterday.

(Father Maria Flores was arrested and released last February after police, raiding a secret mass, killed a 14-year-old girl worshiper. He was conducting the mass. The raid precipitated the "peaceful uprising," in which Catholics reopened churches closed by Mexican law.)

$250,000 Paid Haiti In Dominican Pact

Port au Prince, Haiti, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Haitian government has received a check for $250,000 from the Dominican government, representing the initial payment of indemnities totaling $750,000 for the October killings of Haitians in Dominican territory.

The payment followed formal ratification yesterday of an agreement settling Haiti's grievances. The balance of the indemnities, to be applied to relief of destitute refugees and families of the victims of the killings, is to be paid in annual installments of $100,000.

Austrian Troops Ready to Act As Nazis Face Cabinet Setback

Austria

Nazis to the cabinet had led Austrian Nazis to believe their day had arrived as a result of the February 12 conference between Hitler and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg.

But last Thursday, Schuschnigg's ringing declaration of Austrian independence before Parliament dashed Nazi hopes and at Graz, hotbed of Nazidom, plans began for the march on Vienna.

Front Claims Duce's Aid.

Fatherland Front circles said Premier Mussolini of Italy had sent a special envoy to Schuschnigg with the assurance that Italy now—as before—upholds Austrian independence.

The chancellor was said to have been given special permission to announce this support as a trump card when he considered the time most propitious.

(A similar move by Mussolini helped prevent Austria from going Nazi at the time Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was assassinated in a Nazi putsch. Italian troops were massed along the Austrian frontier at that time in drastic warning Il Duce would permit no moves toward union of Germany and Austria.)

At Linz preparations were going forward for the German day celebration at which Seyss-Inquart was to speak March 6. Special trains were booked from all parts of Upper Austria to Linz.

Seyss-Inquart in "Trap."

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Vienna, Feb. 28—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's hand-picked representative in the new Austrian cabinet, Minister of Interior Arthur von Seyss-Inquart, today faced removal by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg as Nazi unrest spread.

Seyss-Inquart faced the alternative of either immediately quelling the disorders or being dismissed by Schuschnigg and succeeded by an anti-Nazi. The minister was believed to have been placed in a dangerous trap as a result of the calling out of the troops at Graz, where thousands of pro-Nazi peasants were turned back.

As minister of public security as well as interior, Seyss-Inquart's only opportunity to remain in office appeared to be by curbing the demands of between 60,000 and 70,000 Styrian Nazis and thereby angering them and disappointing Hitler, with whom he conferred in Berlin last week.

Village Tinker Weds Daughter Of MacDonald

Guests Whoop It Up at Her Pub as She Becomes Bride in London.

By the Associated Press.

Speen, England, Feb. 28.—Ishbel MacDonald, "First Lady" of Great Britain when her father was prime minister, was married today to Norman Ridgley, the village tinker, who is captain of the darts team at her pub, "Ye Olde Plow Inn."

And the boys were whooping it up at The Plow tonight—that is, up to the 10 p. m. closing time—for "the new master and his wife."

The bar taps began to flow when "Miss Ishbel" rang up at opening time from Hampstead Townhall in London and giggled:

"Well, we've done it!"

When Ishbel accompanied her father to the United States in 1929 she was reported engaged to a peer of the realm; her brother is a cabinet minister; she still dines once in a while at Buckingham Palace with the King and Queen.

Only two weeks ago all England was surprised when she announced her engagement to the handyman who beats the drum in the village band. Both are 34 years old.

Dressed in navy blue, without flowers, Mrs. Ridgley smiled coyly after the London ceremony and said, "I'm not going to tell you about the honeymoon."

The hatless tinker blushed and said nothing.

Ecuador Officials Foil President's Overthrow

Quito, Ecuador, Feb. 28 (AP).—The government announced today it had frustrated a plot to overthrow the regime of Gen. Alberto Enriquez, president since October 23, 1937.

Commandant Jorge Quintana, minister of the interior, said the conspiracy was fomented by partisans of the former president, Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra, who would have been restored to the presidency had the coup succeeded. Velasco was ousted in 1935 after an attempt to proclaim a dictatorship.

Systematic Relief Procedure.

Despite the gross neglect of some unemployed groups in Washington, the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations is probably justified in deciding not to recommend an increase in the $900,000 local relief item at present. Chairman Thomas is laying plans for an investigation of relief needs here. Since the only point at issue is the amount to be appropriated for the fiscal year beginning next July, a final decision may well be left until the results of the inquiry are known.

Since the controversy over relief started, moreover, Congress has voted $250,000,000 additional for WPA projects, without attaching any conditions to its use. The District will benefit from the allocation of some of these funds to local work-relief projects. Indeed, it may be reasonably argued that the WPA should provide jobs for all the District's destitute, able-bodied breadwinners now without either jobs or relief, because local funds for that purpose have been denied.

At any rate, the District's pressing need for additional funds will diminish to the extent that these employables are given work. Resources appear to be almost adequate to care for the destitute unemployables.

The acting WPA administrator and the chairman of the Social Security Board are co-operating with Senator Thomas in outlining plans for the projected impartial expert study of District relief problems, needs and policies. Their advice and assistance should assure a reliable and authoritative report that will put an end to futile controversies over the adequacy of the relief budget. When the facts are known, Senator Thomas explains that there will be ample time to make provision for additional relief funds, if needed, in the final deficiency bill.

This seems to be a reasonable way of dealing with a problem that has been bungled for lack of information. If the report is carefully prepared, Congress will have no valid excuse for failure to act upon its findings.

Trends In Foreign Trade.

Foreign trade currents sometimes change their direction with startling suddenness, as shown by predictions a few months ago that the United States would end 1937 with an unfavorable trade balance.

In 1936 exports topped imports by less than $34,000,000, and during the first half of 1937 imports were considerably above exports in all except one month. During the latter half of the year, however, marked and steady declines in imports occurred, with the result that 1937 ended with a trade balance in our favor of $261,000,000. The January figures bring additional evidence of the reversal of the trade trend, with an export excess of $119,000,000 contrasted with an import excess of $18,000,000 in January, 1937.

The extraordinarily rapid expansion of imports, which began in the latter half of 1936 and continued into the summer of the following year, was due to a combination of causes. Among these were shortages of agricultural products, higher prices and increased industrial demand for imported raw materials. The current business recession, with its accompanying decline in prices, together with the improvement in the agricultural situation, was immediately reflected in sharp declines in both the value and quantity of imports.

Exports, on the other hand, showed a marked expansion, fortunately sustained throughout the year. Shipments of agricultural products increased and there was a strong foreign demand for our manufactures. Indeed, it is reported that the value of exports of automobiles and industrial machinery was larger in December than in any month since the first half of 1929. In 1937 the export trade was 36 per cent greater in value and 28 per cent larger in volume than in 1936. Except for this flourishing export trade many more unemployed would now be walking our streets.

Only the most exhaustive analysis, commodity by commodity and country by country, would justify any positive conclusions as to the effects of the reciprocal trade agreements upon the volume, value, character and direction of our foreign trade. The official statistics do, however, completely disprove the rash propagandist assertions that our markets are being flooded with imports from trade agreement countries without compensating offsets in increased exports.

Dr. Henry F. Grady, vice chairman of the Tariff Commission and former head of the State Department's division of trade agreements, pointed out in a recent address that imports from nonagreement countries showed a greater increase last year than imports from agreement countries. By contrast, the increase in our exports to agreement countries was greater than in the case of nonagreement countries. Of course, it does not follow that these differences are due to the existence or nonexistence of the reciprocal trade pacts. But the figures certainly show that our export trade has not suffered because of them.

State Department officials have constantly urged the obvious necessity of buying from foreigners if we wish to sell to them. They have repeatedly emphasized the fact that an excess of imports is not always or necessarily a national misfortune. In their zeal to refute unjustified criticisms they should beware of overstressing the importance of so-called favorable trade balances and talking as though the chief aim of the trade agreements is to expand our exports, and keep down imports.

Schuschnigg Holds The Fort.

The Austrian developments of the past fortnight bear testimony to the validity of the old saying that tea is never drunk as hot as it is brewed.

Two weeks ago the jig appeared to be up for Austria as a sovereign and independent nation. At Berchtesgaden, on February 12, Hitler had presented Chancellor Schuschnigg with an ultimatum which the latter could have safely ignored only if he had been assured of adequate support from the outside. That support was not forthcoming. Neither Great Britain nor France nor even Italy showed any disposition to come to Austria's assistance.

So Schuschnigg capitulated. He reorganized his cabinet to include several Nazi sympathizers, with one of them, Dr. Seyss-Inquart, in the key position of minister of the interior. He freed all Nazi prisoners, including those who had been jailed for complicity in the assassination of Dollfuss in 1934. And while Hitler's quid pro quo was presumably to be a reassertion of the Third Reich's willingness to respect Austria's independence, this, it was believed, would have little practical value.

As a matter of fact, in his speech of February 20 Hitler did not bother to renew his 1936 pledge regarding Austrian independence. And the presumption was that it would not be long before the co-ordination of Austria with the Third Reich would be carried to a conclusion completely successful from the Nazi viewpoint.

This presumption cannot yet be dismissed as invalid. The military force which Hitler is said to have threatened at the time of his interview with Schuschnigg may yet be employed in a direct assault on Austria's independence. But in the meantime developments have occurred which clearly indicate a rising tide of opposition, within and without Austria, to the disappearance of that nation.

Those elements in Austria which have every reason to oppose a Nazi regime in Vienna—Socialists, Catholics, Jews, liberals and others—have rallied to the banner of a free Austria. In public addresses Schuschnigg himself has made it clear that his retreat in the face of Nazi pressure was by no means a rout. His regime has now gone further. By a strong display of military force a Nazi attempt to organize a march on Vienna from nearby Graz has been forestalled.

The Austrian Nazis are now discovering that the liberty vouchsafed them as a result of the Berchtesgaden agreement does not mean license. Above all, it does not mean that they will be unopposed in their plan to co-ordinate the Austrian regime in every particular with that obtaining in Germany.

In a sense the internal struggle now going on in Austria between the Nazis, on the one hand, and those opposing their principles and practices, on the other, means a return to the situation which obtained before the 1934 civil war in Vienna. Prior to that tragedy various efforts were made to bring about a coalition of anti-Nazi elements in Austria. These efforts disappeared in a sea of blood when the Dollfuss government took armed action against the Socialists. From then on the Austrian leaders had to look to Italy for support in maintaining the independence of the little Danubian state.

Since then much has happened in Germany to antagonize certain of the elements in Austria that once were inclined to favor Anschluss. For this reason Schuschnigg's courageous stand of last Thursday bids fair to make him, for the first time since he took over the government from the dying hands of Dollfuss, a truly popular figure.

Now as heretofore the continued maintenance of Austrian independence depends only in part on the Austrians themselves, in greater measure on outside powers. But it is not unlikely that the spirit of independence manifested in Austria during the past fortnight will encourage the French and Italians not to despair of Austria's fate. With Great Britain amenable to an Anglo-Italian deal, it is again possible that Italy will reconsider her apparent willingness to have Austria fall into Hitler's lap.

Three Faces Nowhere.

Books and movies based on international intrigue can be expected to droop badly as a result of the current "spy scare." The drabness of the trio picked up in New York is equaled only by the crudity of their technique. The apparent leader of the three is reported to have been operating on a monthly stipend of $50, which would allow him little champagne with which to maintain the bright traditions of the trade. Moreover, delivery of the wanted "plans" was to have been worth but a measly $1,000. Plainly, the depression has hit even the spy business.

As for the methods of the "ring," Edgar Wallace and the legion of ghost writers who have followed him must be whirling in their graves. Evidently Kim's cardinal axiom for spies, that "it is always darkest under the lamp," was utterly ignored. Passports were needed. But did the spies simply walk up and apply for them? Not at all. They concocted the absurd scheme of impersonating a non-existent Undersecretary of State and ordering the documents from an office which, as every one else knows, never issues them.

In truth, the only approximately clever move of the spies was their selection of a go-between. To begin with, she was red-headed. More to the point, perhaps, she was a hair-dresser on a smart transatlantic liner. Few better clearing houses for international gossip could have been conceived. "Ah, so Madame was at ze White House las' week when Malin Craig wore hees new uniform? What deed ze general say about ze new air bomb, hein?"

Real Community Service.

Thanks to the persistent efforts of Judge Nathan Cayton, the District will soon have a poor man's court. Persons without means to fight small claims through regular judicial procedure will be able to invoke a simplified and inexpensive means of attaining justice. In many respects this is the greatest advance in handling civil disputes that has been made here in recent years.

Since both the Senate and House have approved the bill, with very little opposition, it should be a simple matter now to complete its enactment. The Senate will doubtless acquiesce in the minor change made by the House, and it may be taken for granted that the President will sign this progressive piece of local legislation.

The District Committees of both the Senate and House are to be commended for the careful way in which they handled this bill. But the largest measure of credit for its enactment goes to Judge Cayton. It was he who worked out plans for a District small-claims court and sponsored the legislation when his fellow judges of the Municipal Court declined to adopt that procedure voluntarily. Through various hearings and debates he has patiently pressed his case, agreeing to amendments where they appeared desirable, but clinging resolutely to the vital principles of the bill.

Too often judges are content to operate obsolete or inadequate machinery provided for them by legislative bodies not intimately acquainted with judicial problems. Judge Cayton has followed a new technique of campaigning for improvements that will permit the Municipal Court to render greater service to the public. Without his efforts Washington would not likely have obtained a small-claims court for many years. As it is, the benefits of conciliation, arbitration and informal procedure in minor cases are almost within the city's grasp.

The persistent jurist who has led this movement is entitled to a community vote of thanks.

Japan's Afterthought.

Japan is evidently inclined to reconsider her naval policy in the light of its now ominous consequences. During the last few years she seems to have assumed that Great Britain and the United States would permit her to attain naval parity once the limitation agreements were discarded. That illusion is now rapidly fading.

Responsibility for renunciation of the Washington naval treaty rests squarely on Japan. Likewise it was that country which prevented the adoption of any further effective naval agreement at London in 1936. Three weeks ago Tokyo officials were given still another opportunity to review the situation. But they even declined to reveal their naval building plans. That attitude has closed the door to all prospects of a naval conference in the near future.

Obviously Japan is concerned over the position in which she is thus left. Apprehension was unmistakably evident in Foreign Minister Koki Hirota's address to the Diet on Saturday. "Japan has no intention of joining any building race," he said. "We are hoping to stop such a race by appealing to the powers' sense of fairness and justice."

Of course, Mr. Hirota would like to stop the race, which Japan started, before the United States and Great Britain begin to lay down ships in large numbers. But it is not to be supposed that Japan will be permitted to retain the advantage she has already gained even if she should request a naval conference in the near future. Before a rediscussion of the naval problem can be justified Tokyo will have to evince a willingness to make more concessions than have been forthcoming in previous negotiations.

The United States has repeatedly demonstrated a sincere desire to reach a naval agreement that would make large-scale building unnecessary. But the time for temporizing on this issue has passed. Unless the Japanese are ready to take a new view of the whole situation, any offer from Tokyo to negotiate on the subject would now scarcely be worth considering.

Man's conquest of distance by rapid transportation and communication facilities has put the entire world in the same boat. And nearly two billion of us sit idly by and let a dozen prancing two-by-four Caesars dangerously rock said boat!

One View Of Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While other nations are acting to the cause of war and other European heads contemplating it, there is no reason why this Nation of ours should shoulder their responsibility and their bloodshed. Certainly, the note sent to Japan by the United States Government firmly saying that it had no intention of ordering Americans to evacuate the central China war area is no advocation of peace. That's a war breeder.

What is it to the United States to send a few million boys across the seas for the sake of a few able-minded and able-bodied American citizens who are fool-minded enough to remain in war areas and have been warned to leave? The young flesh and blood of America sees no beauty or glamour in the devastation of war.

The Nazis And The Catholic Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The trial of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller which is now progressing in Germany, and which has received so much publicity in this country, serves to remind all American Christians of their tremendous debt to the Christians of Germany who have so stoutly and courageously resisted the yoke of oppression fitted to their necks by the Nazi government. The bravery of these clergymen and laymen, Catholic and Protestant, deserves our heartiest respect and our most respectful emulation.

As a Catholic I am more familiar with what the Catholic Church has been doing there, but I know that Mr. Niemoeller's courage typifies that of millions of Protestant Germans to whom I gladly pay tribute.

That the Catholic Church has been vilely persecuted in the Third Reich there can be no doubt. But it has been a particularly clever and diabolical form of persecution. No open and candid feeding to the lions—which could be readily recognized as persecution and accordingly resisted; but continued assurances of friendship and respect accompanied by gradually increasing but carefully veiled devices to sabotage the church.

We all remember the largely trumped-up "immorality trials;" we have not forgotten the shotgun private school plebiscite in Catholic Bavaria and elsewhere; we have read of the Nazi "Brown Sisters," who are more and more ousting and replacing Catholic nuns; we have heard of the imprisonment and exile of hundreds of Catholic priests and laymen—e. g., the former soldier, Father Rupert Mayer; the Rev. Dr. Max Groesser, well known in this country for his humanitarian work and now serving time in a German prison; Henirich Bruening, exiled former chancellor—and, perhaps more damaging than all the rest we know of the semiofficial program of paganization carried on under the direction of the author of that devilishly dishonest attack on Christianity, "The Myth of the Twentieth Century," who is none other than Alfred Rosenberg.

Has the church taken this lying down? As I said before it very decidedly has not. It takes courage publicly to oppose a regime that is solidly in the saddle and backed by all the instruments of force, and that has, moreover, exhibited its ruthlessness by imprisonment and "purging." Yet listen to these fearless words of Pope Pius XI, uttered to the world in his encyclical letter of last March:

If the tree of peace which we planted with pure intention in German soil has not borne the fruit we desired in the interests of your people, no one in the wide world who has eyes to see and ears to hear can say today that the fault lies with the church and her head. The lessons of the past years make it clear where the responsibility lies. They disclose machinations that from the beginning had no other aim than a war of extermination. In the furrows where we labored to plant the seeds of sincere peace, others were sowing—like the enemy in Holy Scripture—the tares of distrust, of discord, hatred, calumny, of secret and open enmity against Christ and His church, an enmity in principle, fed from 1,000 springs and working with every means at its disposal. With them and only with them, as well as with their open and silent supporters, lies the responsibility that now, instead of the rainbow of peace, the storm clouds of destructive religious conflicts are visible on the German horizon.

Or hear what the holy father so courageously said in his allocution to the College of Cardinals last Christmas:

We shall not hesitate to give the true name to things in Germany, where there has been in existence for some time religious persecution. This persecution has been denied. But we know there is persecution, and persecution which has hardly ever been so frightful and grave.

These are the words of Michael Cardinal Faulhaber, delivered before the Men's Sodality in Munich:

Week after week the vilest insults and calumnies appear in writing and in pictured form in German newspapers and periodicals attacking the Catholic bishops, the dogmas and institutions of the church, without our having the least possibility of stigmatizing falsehood as falsehood through the radio, the correspondence bureau, or even by means of the religious press.

And our own American bishops, meeting here in Washington last fall, were not hesitant in "giving the true name to things in Germany." They wrote: "Having followed the development of the persecution in your country through four years, we realize that in carrying on their nefarious work the oppressors of supernatural religion have in very truth been 'wiser than the children of light.' Beginning with petty restrictions, this persecution, according to the well worked-out plan of its authors, has increased in violence. Today the sense of all religious-minded men and women throughout the world is outraged by the satanic resourcefulness of these leaders of modern paganism and by the incredible excesses committed by them in their attempt to exterminate religion and to blot out from the minds of the German people all true knowledge and love of God . . ."

Truly these are sad and depressing days for the church in Germany, but the example of these brave Christian leaders is indeed, in Cardinal Faulhaber's words, "a fiery beacon" before our eyes. No praise is too great for their courage and long-suffering — yes, even their godly humor in an evil hour. Let me conclude this letter with an amusing sample, as related in an English newspaper: "Count Galen, the Bishop of Munster, was preaching in his cathedral in Westphalia. His text was the influence of the church in the education of the young. Suddenly a uniformed Nazi in the congregation rose and shouted: 'What do you know of the young who have no wife and children yourself?' The bishop retorted, like a flash: 'I will not stand any derogatory remarks about the Fuehrer in this house.'"

Justice Holmes' House.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The rejection of the bill introduced by Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, by the Library Committee of the House, to preserve the former residence of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes at 1720 I street, is deplorable to all citizens who have any concern about preserving the reputation of Washington as a handsome world capital. Its kindred bill has been introduced by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, in the Senate.

Various suggestions were offered in the too brief public hearing before the Library Committee in regard to the best use to which to put this building, which the Government does not even have to purchase, but merely to accept, since the will of Justice Holmes left his entire estate to the nation. The most appealing of these was to make it a library of poetry, devoted to the collection of poetry, which would become the shrine for the nation's poets, as the Folger Library for Shakespeariana, and our numerous art galleries for artists.

This fine old residence is well located and well designed for such a purpose and this would be a fitting memorial to that gracious spirit who long presided there and whose interests were far beyond and above the merely legalistic aspects of life.

It is in the heart of the hotel and club district, within walking distance of innumerable visitors. If we care to maintain what is after all our "leading industry" it is necessary to preserve at least a vestige of Washington's old-time intimate charm.

The house is well built, spacious and dignified, but compact. Its maintenance cost would be low. It still has intact its charming old walled garden, an oasis in the midst of the city's clamor. To allow it to be destroyed would be a deplorable deed and a desecration of the name and the memory of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

For Income And Sales Taxes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have attended several sessions of the hearing before the House subcommittee on the subject of District taxes and have not been impressed by the arguments against the various forms of taxes proposed, with the exception of the business privilege tax, which should clearly be discarded.

It is generally agreed that all who receive the benefits of government should contribute, in proportion to their ability, to its support. Application of any particular form of tax, to the exclusion of others, would violate this principle. Congress should disregard the pleas of groups advocating special reliance upon certain taxes under discussion, and should enact a law that will bring about the widest participation by the citizens of the District. I think both a sales tax and an income tax should be included. Of course, some difficulties wil arise in administration, but any tax that has been found workable in other jurisdictions can be made to work here.

It is insisted that a sales tax would fall most heavily upon those least able to pay, but with the exclusion of the principal necessaries of life and comfort, the lower income groups—many members of which would be exempt from other taxes now under discussion—should be willing to make the small contribution arising from a moderate sales tax in relieving the present necessities.

The chairman of the sub-committee has repeatedly stated his opinion that neither a sales tax nor an income tax for the District will be passed by the House, but the people of the District should promptly unite in an effort to secure both. Otherwise, there is grave danger that a grossly discriminatory bill will be passed. I agree with your excellent editorial of February 26 on the subject of an income tax.

The Post Impressionist

The Sweeps.

ANOTHER Irish sweepstakes seems to be upon us. Tickets are everywhere. The waitress at the corner restaurant, the cigar clerk at the drug store, the hotel bell-hop and the curbstone bookmaker all have been offering them for sale to acquaintances, close or casual, for the $3.50 fee. Some have been charging $3.60, I understand, the extra dime being "for the cost of the money orders."

And soon we shall be reading of the stevedore's wife, and the apartment janitor, or the aged couple on relief having won fabulous sums in the Dublin "draw."

It's fascinating to me to wonder how great is the aggregate joy that springs from the semiannual sweepstakes, and how tremendous the total disappointment must be.

How many of those who by chances make a sacrifice to do so? How many permit themselves any real hope that they will win? Do many attain real pleasure from dreaming of the things they may do if the fortune comes to them? And does the dreaming buoy their spirits and make their days more pleasurable? Do many actually pray for success in the drawing, as one winner of a minor prize told reporters he had?

And with no attempt to moralize, how much real enjoyment comes to those few who do win and suddenly find themselves so fortunate that their entire lives must be upset? If it were possible to measure all the happiness and all the disappointment that the "sweeps" bring, would they be approximately even in volume or intensity?

One can't help pondering, too, how all the millions of tickets get into the country and into circulation, in the face of postal regulations, Coast Guard rules and police orders. Every salesman, questioned, seems to get them from "a friend," but where does the friend get them? What is the system of distribution, and through how many hands do the tickets pass after coming "fresh off the boat" like prohibition liquor?

Is it possible that many of them are counterfeit, produced in this country and circulated by syndicates? The water-marked paper on which they are printed always seems to be of the same quality and markings, but is it possible for paper identical to that used in the genuine tickets to be duplicated here?

I think I shan't buy a ticket this time.

I bought one for the drawing last fall but I can't say the transaction was all that I expected it to be.

The ticket was offered me by a friend who said he was just selling a few in order to get one or two for himself. He was a friend I had known for a dozen years—a hard-working fellow who didn't beat his family or get drunk, or borrow money "until pay day" and forget to pay it back. And dealing with him seemed to meet the admonition on the ticket itself that "the purchaser should satisfy himself thoroughly of the trustworthiness of the person from whom the ticket is purchased."

So I bought the thing and put it away against the day of the drawing. I didn't waste much time musing on the possibilities of winning one of the worthwhile prizes or on pleasant ways of enjoying the fruits of such a fortunate eventuality. I didn't plan any trips to Florida or California, or buy any houses in contemplation of possible victory. I didn't even keep in mind definitely the date of the all-important drawing.

But when news items told us that the drawing was only one day off, it came to me suddenly that I had never received the "official receipt" which my friend had said was sent from Dublin to every purchaser of a ticket. It didn't especially worry me, for I supposed the friend had received the receipt and would drop in with it before the drawing.

However, drawing day came and still no receipt, no friend. The second and concluding day passed as uneventfully for me. My name most certainly was not among those published as having been plucked from the monster whirling drums in the lottery headquarters in Dublin.

But when all the drawing had been done, when all the names of the winners had been made public, my friend did drop in and bring me the receipt.

"Well," he said, proffering it, "this will show you were in the drawing, anyway."

I glanced at the receipt and put it into my pocket, not at all thrilled with the way the thing had turned out, but telling myself I would just forget it. Later, in an idle moment, I took the receipt from my pocket and read it more closely. Somehow it didn't seem just right—there was something odd about it.

Then it came to me. I recalled fill-out the counterfoil on the ticket—the stub— at the time I made the purchase, and recalled that I had been rather formal about it. With so much money potentially involved I didn't want to be careless. I was careful to print my name and address plainly. I printed the "W. V. Nesaly" so clearly there could be no mistaking it.

But the receipt, I now noticed, was made out to "Bill Nesaly."

I don't think they should be so familiar clear over there in Dublin, complete strangers as they are.

And so I think I shan't buy another ticket this time.

W. V. Nesaly.

Fair Enough

Hollywood Labor.

Los Angeles.

THIS ITEM will be a sort of overture to an attempt to describe a strange class struggle which is taking place in Hollywood, where a union of actors and a union of writers are making belligerent passes at the motion picture industry. This is being done ostensibly on behalf of an ill-used character known as the little fellow, and ostensibly in a spirit of lofty altruism. It is a phase of the great brawl between the American Federation of Labor and the C. I. O., which is thrashing around on land and sea all along the Pacific Coast from Seattle to San Diego.

PEGLER.

The actors' union is called the Screen Actors Guild. The writers call themselves the Screen Writers Guild, and are a subsidiary of the Authors League. A group of dissenters among the writers has formed a rival or counter-organization known as the Screen Playwrights, which, inevitably, has been denounced as a house union, although its members work for various houses and bounce from one house to another as opportunities occur, as, indeed, most writers do in the film business.

• • • •

THERE ARE ALSO some rugged individualists of the writing trade who refuse to join either union on ground that they are doing fabulously well by comparison with their wildest dreams of the days when they were reading copy or chasing patrol wagons for newspapers at $50 a week, and that the Screen Writers Guild would deliver them into the control of the office of the Authors League in New York.

The Screen Playwrights were organized more for the purpose of resisting the attempts of the guild to dominate the writing business than for any constructive or remedial mission. Some of the members say, if the guild were to acquire the power to which it aspires it would possess an incidental power of censorship which would be inherent in the right to boycott and smother the social and political ideas written by nonguilders. It has been argued that if the Writers Guild and the Actors Guild were to impose their programs fully and act in close co-operation, and if the radicals among them should exercise control, there would be an effective bar against the presentation of any thought out of sympathy with theirs.

The leaders in all three movements are men and women who receive enormous pay. Many of them live in palaces, and a proposal that the rich members of the Actors Guild accept a horizontal reduction of 25 per cent, to be added to the pay of the little fellow whose plight is breaking their hearts was promptly rejected.

The little fellow is the obscure actor or writer receiving small pay and subject to layoffs between jobs. The big fellows among the actors enjoy the security of long-term contracts, but even the big fellows in the writing trade work on short terms. They have social security, however, in salaries ranging from $1,000 to $2,000 a week, from which they should be, and usually are, able to save enough to carry over from job to job.

DEFINITIONS of a small salary vary. Some unknown writers get as little as $75 a week, but the case is cited of a young man receiving $200 a week who complained bitterly of being underpaid and, on being reminded that he worked for $35 in New York, replied that everything was relative out here. Another writer refused to state his salary to the labor board on the ground that the figure would tend to degrade him, but admitted under pressure that he was drawing $750 a week.

In the background is the International Alliance of the Theatrical and Stage Employes, an A. F. of L. union with the characteristic strong, exclusive tendencies of the A. F. of L. This one embraces the mechanical crafts of the movie business, some of which have important artistic duties and by its discipline has the power to exclude from employment, by excluding from membership, men and women of great ability. It is an ambitious union and, on the principle of the A. F. of L. Teamsters on the Pacific Coast, who claim jurisdiction over everyone who even eats or wears anything handled by a trucker, might one day try to absorb the actors and writers. It might—but that is all that the possibility amounts to as yet.

This introduction is offered subject to correction or amendment as further information is obtained in a scattered and seclusive community. All the points involved are matters of controversy, in some cases becoming bitterly personal, and the job is one of spade-work reporting which will take a little time.

At first examination it has the appearance of a radical, left-wing movement in the artistic side of the movie business, and an instinctive opposition by the conservatives, who naturally are accused of serving the bosses for selfish reasons.

The League Today

Despite Apparent Return To Pre-War Power Politics, Observer Sees Influence Still Exerted By Geneva Councils.

By Bertram Pickard.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

IT IS WIDELY said and thought today that, to all intents and purposes, we are back in pre-war days. Furthermore, that not only the League of Nations, but the general ideas and impulses that brought it to birth after the war have little, if any, influence upon the present course of world affairs. Italy's departure from the league coupled with the recent discussions in the League Council and the special committee dealing with league reform provide a good occasion for examining such contentions.

It would be foolish to deny that, in many respects, the present international situation is strongly reminiscent of that which prevailed in 1914.

The drift toward two major camps in the struggle for power and advantage of various kinds is obvious. In fact the alignment is precisely the same, if Japan be substituted for the place formerly occupied by the Austro-Hungarian empire in the old Triple Alliance.

Power Politics Revived In Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis.

THE FACT that the new Triple Alliance, styled the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis, is ostensibly cemented around a campaign against communism is important and has complicated repercussions in international relationships. But it does not obscure the plain fact that the "front" against communism and Geneva is motivated as much, or more, by consideration of power-politics as by those of social and political theory.

Again, as in 1914, there is the same unstable oscillation of smaller states back and forth between the orbits of the major constellations, measuring the fluctuating pulls of the force of political and economic gravity. Naturally enough, this has taken the form in the main of a movement away from close association with the preponderant powers of early post-war Europe—Great Britain and France, notably the latter—and proportionately toward a position which records positively, or negatively, the growing power and influence of Germany and Italy, notably the former. The loosening of the ties first of Poland, then of Belgium, with France well illustrates this process.

Finally, to complete the apparent reshaping of the pre-war pattern, we have the growing tendency on the part of a whole group of war-time neutrals to move out of the "collective system" of the League Covenant, as drafted and in part applied back into that "neutrality" as understood by international law of the pre-war and war-time epoch.

The recent initiative of the Scandinavian countries, under the leadership of Sweden, to get the law of the league on "sanctions" modified is one evidence of this.

The most striking case, however, is that of Switzerland, which country has let it be clearly understood that she wishes to return to that "absolute" neutrality accorded her in 1815 and abandoned for the special and somewhat anomalous status, sometimes styled "differential" neutrality, adopted in 1920 at the time she entered the League.

The pre-war situation has been often described as that of "international anarchy." That is how the Dutch delegate somberly described the present situation during the recent Geneva debates. He frankly apostrophised the present state of affairs as "each nation for itself and God for us all."

League Represents New Factor In World Politics.

IF HISTORY be repeating itself—and literally there is, of course, never repetition—it is doing so with a difference. That difference may be gauged, to some extent at least, by reference to the League of Nations. For whatever may be said about the League, no one can deny that its continued existence, despite all the assaults of rampant nationalism from within and without, represents a new factor in international relations which changes the pattern, not merely in theory but in actual fact.

It is commonly asserted that the whole conception of "collective security" inherent in the League Covenant is as dead as the dodo. Despite the strength of the attack on the sanctions provisions of the Covenant (Articles 10, 16 and 17) few states propose the elimination of such provisions once for all. Quite apart from the technical difficulties of revising the text of the Covenant, the chief proponents of change (i. e. the group of "neutrals") emphasize that change from obligatory to optional sanctions should be provisional rather than permanent. Their motive is two-fold: To escape from the dangers of an unequal and sporadic application of sanctions, and to bring theory into line with a practice that is likely to prevail for long to come.

But this via media between existing theoretical obligations and their total elimination did not carry the day. It was not even the preponderant view. Admittedly Czechoslovakia is one of the states that has most to gain from any "collective system." Nevertheless, the Czech delegate's argument that because a law had been violated it did not therefore cease to have practical value was well received; while the closely reasoned speech of Paul Boncour for France in favor of strengthening rather than weakening the Covenant won much favorable comment in League circles.

The British attitude remains characteristically flexible and non-committal. But if, on the one hand, Great Britain's promise to use the league machinery whenever "circumstances permit" may be taken to imply there are many circumstances in which Geneva is out of the whole "security" question postponed shows that the British government wants to see which way several cats are going to jump before making up its mind on this thorny issue.

Indeed, if the Far Eastern conflict may be taken as any indication of its views, it would appear the British government, while unwilling to become involved in hostilities with Japan, is by no means ready for a "neutral" attitude. The League Council's resolution on the Sino-Japanese conflict gave a minimum of satisfaction to China no doubt. But it did two things which are far from meaningless. It not only recognized the government of Chiang Kai-shek when Japan no longer does so, but it encouraged support of that government by individual states-members of the League, which might imply a good deal in the event of any such member (e. g., Soviet Russia) becoming embroiled with Japan.

Geneva Motions May Be Merest Window Dressing.

BUT it will be argued, all this Geneva talk is simply window dressing, merely disguising the alignments and counter-alignments that would be taking place anyway, League or no League.

It is impossible to prove that this is not so. Nevertheless, one has the distinct impression that the underlying ideas in the Covenant, and the new method which regular conference at Geneva represents are not wholly negligible factors in the present situation, and that they do spell a difference when measured by pre-war conditions that is hard to assess. As further evidence of this a few further facts and factors may be adduced.

It is noticeable that some states, despite gravitation toward the Rome-Berlin axis, and despite the temptation of the anti-Communist bait, both resist that bait and Italian incitement to wreck the League.

Again the Swiss government called down a good deal of criticism upon its head for not only claiming the right to return to its pre-war neutral status but also joining in the attack upon the sanctions provisions of the Covenant. It was not unnaturally said that, if the Swiss wished to escape all collective obligations under the Covenant and have their neutrality guaranteed as well, notably by France and Great Britain, the least she could do was to leave the other members of the League free to decide what was best for themselves. Judging from comment in the Swiss press, it will not be surprising if the Swiss government, when it comes to formulate its demands concerning neutrality, makes its desire to remain within the League fold abundantly plain.

Of course, if the League—as some people used to think—was a new religion founded on the conversion of sovereign states, then surely the League is dead; for it never existed! Or again, if the League was merely a clever dodge—as some thought and some still think—to hold Germany down and preserve the status quo, then the League is dead, too.

But if—as the present writer believes—the League is the first tentative attempt at permanent consultation and conference on all matters of common concern (including war) in a shrinking world, then the League will live on.

It will live because it must live under modern conditions of interdependence. Hence, Geneva does make a difference when estimating the similarities and dissimilarities of the pre-war and post-war worlds.

Whether, it makes all the difference between 1914 and 1938 remains to be seen. No man can say.

The Japanese Count The Cost.

THE REVOLT in the lower house of the Japanese Parliament against the national mobilization bill may prove, at the present juncture, more dramatic than effective.

The odds are still good that those army elements sponsoring this measure which would regiment Japanese labor, industry and finance to a degree never before attempted are still strong enough to have their way. But even if the present flare-up in the Diet does not achieve its intended purpose of bringing about the defeat of the mobilization measure the significance of what is happening in Tokyo at this time can hardly be exaggerated. For what we are seeing is the first large-scale manifestation in Japan of dissatisfaction with the conduct of the war.

A FRONTAL attack on the war machine and its policies is, at the moment, out of the question. On paper, at least, Japan's military position is excellent. A large area, including such important centers as Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai and Nanking, is under Japanese control. The hope now is that with the capture of the Lunghai Railway and the taking over in its entirety of the line running from Peiping to Hankow the Japanese will be masters of so much of China that Chiang Kai-shek will have to sue for peace.

But the Japanese are not so sure as they were some time ago of the speedy end of the war. Originally that war was portrayed to them merely as a sort of punitive expedition to be liquidated in six weeks or two months. But even after Shanghai fell the war went on. Then, in Japanese minds, Nanking then became the symbol of the last remaining barrier of Chinese resistance.

The fall of the Chinese capital early in December was thus greeted with great jubilation in Japan. As the Oriental Economist, published in Tokyo, pointed out in its January, 1938, issue:

The speedy reduction of Nanking and the apparent termination of major military operations have created a favorable impression in many quarters and values in the stock market have risen by 10 per cent on the average."

Nearly two months have now elapsed and there has actually been no termination of major military operations. On the contrary, the struggle for Hsuchow and the Lunghai Railway has revealed a continuance of the Chinese capacity for resistance that had already astonished and alarmed the Japanese at Shanghai.

• • • •

THE JAPANESE thus find themselves clinging to a bear by the tail. They cannot safely hold on, neither can they easily let go. Were the issue of continuing the fight or abandoning it put up to the Japanese people it is certain they would vote for the former policy. And it is only natural that they should do so. Nonetheless, they are beginning to realize that their militarists have brought them to an extremely dangerous pass. Not being able to attack the army directly they are taking it out on Premier Konoye.

Already the cost to Japan of the military operations on the mainland have been in excess of the total cost of the 1894-95 war with China and the 1904-05 war with Russia combined. And the end is not yet. In the meantime all the competitive advantages which the Japanese enjoyed not so long ago in the markets of the world are rapidly disappearing.

The wholesale price index is rising rapidly in the island empire while it has been falling in Great Britain and the United States. The foreign exchange licensing system and the restrictions imposed on the imports of essential raw materials have also created additional complications for Japanese businessmen. They find the present situation and outlook extremely discouraging.

BUT THE WORST aspect of the present situation is that with each passing day Japan becomes more and more vulnerable to outside pressure. In other words the time is approaching when Japan, while possibly still able to continue the war against China, will increasingly have to be wary of antagonizing any third power.

Signs of this are multiplying but perhaps the most significant is the speed with which the Tokyo government changed its tune regarding the evacuation of Americans from danger areas the moment the United States Government manifested any resistance to that order. The attitude of contemptuous indifference to the rights and interests of foreigners in China manifested by the Japanese army in the early days of the undeclared war now definitely belongs to the past.

MORE THAN ever Japan has begun to realize that she is in a position of dangerous isolation. To be sure she has her quasi-allies of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle. That combination of aggressive states has had certain propagandist values for the Japanese government in lining up its people behind the war. But the Japanese know full well that the triangle is a bluff.

Germany, for instance, was during the last six months of 1937 the principal purveyor of arms and ammunition to the Chinese and Germans are still acting as military advisers of the Chinese army. As for Italy, if and when that country comes to terms with Great Britain, Italian support (it has never been anything more than verbal) for Japan's policies may disappear. On the other hand it is also significant that the principal point made by the opposition in the Diet to the mobilization bill is that this measure is "Nazi" and "Fascist."

The Japanese people are not in the least happy over their government's international partners or in their nation's international position.

Fire Engines Called

A Rural Tragedy

Mrs. Quackenbush's Chickens.

TUESDAY EVENING at 6:30 a fire call came into the village hall from the Quackenbush residence. Ed Haverly ran to the bell rope and sounded the alarm. A few firemen were in the hall awaiting the time for the annual meeting. They had the village fire truck going before the bell stopped ringing. A small fire in the straw on the floor of the Quackenbush chicken house was easily put out with chemicals. With all their promptness and efficiency, however, a little tragedy had happened, for 233 white Leghorn pullets were heaped there inside the chicken house door, smothered by the smoke and fumes from smoldering litter on the concrete floor. A brooder oil heater is used to heat the house and to keep the floor litter dry. It is believed the pullets scratched the litter against the heater, from which it took fire.

This flock of Leghorn pullets was the pride of Mrs. Quackenbush. They had been reared carefully and were healthy and active, with red combs and song and chatter all day long as they searched for scratch feed beneath the litter on the floor. The brooder stove kept them warm and the house dry and an electric light prolonged the short winter days until 9 p. m., when it was shut off. They had laid 148 eggs the day of the fire. As usual, some cracked corn had been thrown into their litter at the supper hour when all seemed well. Undoubtedly they were singing and scratching in the straw when the smoke of the fire began to fill their rather close quarters. They knew where life and liberty in fresh air could be had, for they piled up before the door, where they were found by Earl Quackenbush. One pullet was still alive, but she died later. Anyone who has brought a flock of pullets to the laying stage at this time of the year will know how to sympathize with the owner of this lost flock.

Tom McCarthy

Names In The News.

THEY TELL me that names make the news. On this occasion, at least, such a belief is comforting.

Of course, gossip columnists cash in on names regularly, but every newspaperman meets, occasionally, those people called interesting. With the names, he bolsters up his conversations, and lends credence to the belief that writing is an interesting game.

McCARTHY.

The name personalities which have passed under this column's gaze are led off by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who, to this column's satisfaction, proved himself a peerless politician when, at a White House reception, he greeted the young lady ahead of me, whom he'd never seen before, with the remark, "So nice to see you . . . again!"

Senator David I. Walsh ranks high on legislative matters, but I'll never forget the night I had him on my radio program, to speak about the disastrous incident which overtook the German dirigible Von Hindenburg. Senator Walsh expressed his regret at the tragedy of the "Heidelberg."

In the realm of the arts and sciences, and not to be forgotten, is the first lady of burlesque, Ann Corio. Ann confessed that she had something of a feeling of fellowship for her audience. But when asked about her cohorts in burlesque, she admitted she didn't know where they came from, and expressed the belief that some of them came directly from the gutter. Which may or may not have been professional jealousy.

And on the distaff side there was Adelaide Moffett, who recently threw up a professional singing career in New York to carry out her social obligations. Her father is James Moffett, Standard Oil executive. I can recall when she, moved by the spirits, would entertain the customers at the Connecticut avenue Heigh-Ho Club just for the fun she got out of singing.

ON THE literary side of the picture there was the remark by Sinclair Lewis the other night. I asked him which of his own books was his favorite.

"They're all the same," he said. "Not the sort of stuff I'd care to read."

And Sinclair Lewis, in a later conversation, went on to mention the columnist, West Pegler, whom he had heard described as an "incredibly gentle man." But, for the puzzled ones, it may be added that gentle as Pegler is, he still calls women "dolls" and speaks of men as "guys," and rarely refers to legs as anything but "gams."

And speaking of gams, Carole Lombard is the loudest woman in Hollywood, if my experience there last summer is any criterion. I heard a wild shriek on the Paramount lot, and without blanching the publicity man said, "Don't be alarmed, that's Carole Lombard laughing."

Of the Hollywood personalities, W. C. Fields is the finest, in this column's opinion. That opinion doesn't even bow to his method of staying on the water wagon.

"The doctor's got me on the wagon," he said. "I can't touch a drop. Of course, I can have a little cognac in my coffee, and a bit of wine sauce on my desert, and rum buns, during the meal . . . but otherwise I'm like the Sahara."

And looking at his most recent motion picture, I notice that he's still wearing his unusual shoes. Look closely and you'll find the toes have been cut out, so that the white of the shoe and the black of the stocking gives the appearance of a sport shoe. Actually, something is wrong with his feet, so he favors a toeless shoe.

SPEAKING OF actors, the wrestlers shouldn't be omitted. The other night up at Turner's Arena I met Chief Chewaki, who pulls coat hangers out of his trunk to strangle his opponents. He is supposed to be a very savage gent.

When I met him he was nearly in tears, discussing a friend who'd just been taken to the hospital for an operation. And if that weren't enough to shake one's faith in wrestlers, "Eats 'Em Alive" Ali Baba came over and said, "Excuse me!"

Zacchini, the Human Cannonball, was the most consummate egoist this column has ever encountered. He figures himself to be a first-rank artist, and he is the sponsor of an art institute in Florida. He figures that he is a one-man renaissance.

Bringing him on the air, along with Elliott Paul, who wrote "Life and Death of a Spanish Town," the great artist Zacchini had to have the preferential place.

Reducing "trivia" to one-line statements, it has been noted by this column that Eleanor Powell sometimes calls even new acquaintances "dear;" that nobody knows the name of the head of the United States Secret Service, whose bureau in many ways corresponds to Hoover's. His name is Frank Wilson.

Ray Bolger, movie comedian and dancer, admits he's had very little education, but prides himself on his penmanship. Betty Grable, now Mrs. Jackie Coogan, is as frightened as a high school girl when asked an impertinent question by a newspaperman.

Insistent report of a vast confusion late last week when five Democratic organizations vied for meeting space in the National Democratic Club at 1500 Rhode Island avenue met as insistent a denial yesterday.

At first it seemed a plausible follow-up on the vaster confusion attending the mix-up between the New York State Democratic Club, of Washington, D. C., and the Indiana Democratic group, both of which wanted the main ballroom for tonight. (The New York club got it.) But there wasn't the vast confusion last week as the report would have it. It amounted to something like this:

Five organizations, all of solid Democratic faith, descended on the club for meetings and what not. The Tennessee State Society finally was shunted into the basement, but as quickly was withdrawn to more airy quarters. The Pennsylvania State Democratic Club came in and got a good row of chairs; the Association of Non-Classified Federal Employes finally found a cubicle for its deliberations, and two other groups were satisfactorily placed. There was no grumbling and growling, as the reports have it.

"You must learn in this world to give and take," said a spokesman for the Tennessee group, philisophically . . . "Everything went just fine; we had a regular love feast . . . It really made me feel good all over to have such nice accomodations" . . . And from the Pennsylvania group spokesman: "From our point of view it was just fine; there was no confusion, from our point of view."

So, from this testimony, it is clear that at least five organizations can meet in the Democratic Club at 1500 Rhode Island avenue and like it. Which makes strange the recent controversy between the New York and Indiana groups, each of which apparently wanted the whole house for shindigs tonight.

The New York Democratic Club gets the whole house and offers for its members' enjoyment four speeches and dancing. The speakers will be Representatives Beiter, Byrne, Lanzetta and Keough; the dancing will begin at 9:30 . . . And among other events: The second annual stamp exhibition of the Collectors' Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., opens this morning in the first floor of the National Museum. It will continue through March; but of especial interest to Federal employes who collect stamps is the showing for Thursday evening, at which Government workers will be honor guests. This will be the only night the exhibition will be open . . . And the gentleman who sent in the announcement added that Col. Karl Truesdell (recently promoted to brigadier general) has the finest collection of Chinese stamps in existence. He obtained these while on China duty . . .

F. H. A. people who remember Charles Pemburn, formerly a field representative, will be interested to know of his election as president of the Nassau County, N. Y., Press Club. Pemburn is now publisher of the Nassau County Record, with offices at Oceanside, N. Y. . . .

In the planning: A big shindig for the A. F. G. E. collectors in the various departments . . . The District Department, A. F. G. E., is planning another monster free dance. With a lesson learned from the last mob scene at the Raleigh, they should have at least ballrooms this time . . . Nomination as the best set of dancers in the Federal service: The dancers of the In-Com-Co Club. We observed their terpsichorean grace, precision, and elegance at the Raleigh Hotel the other night. Altogether, their preeminence on the dance floor is something even for the more famous L. D. R. A. to waltz at . . .

Lee Pressman, counsel for the C. I. O., will speak on "Labor on the Economic Front," at 8:30 o'clock Thursday evening before the Forum of the Federal Workers School. Following the address, the audience will join in discussion, directed by a panel composed of the school's students and faculty . . . Postoffice clerks, customs and internal revenue employes will meet Friday evening, 8 o'clock, in the assembly hall of the Baltimore Postoffice to hear Robert H. Alcorn, retirement expert; Gill Hyatt, of the Postal Clerks Federation, and Godfrey V. Wickware, executive assistant to A. F. G. E. President Stengle. A thousand persons are expected . . . All employes are invited to be the guests of S. E. C. Lodge 436, A. F. G. E., at a rally to be held at 4:45 p. m. today in the Hearing Room. Speakers will include Michael D. Schaefer (Navy Department), and G. Carroll Dimond (Adjutant General's Office), both A. F. G. E. national vice presidents. On the announcement the A. F. G. E. declares: "Ask your Congressman confidentially which Federal employe organization is the real factor on the Hill. There is only one answer" (the A. F. G. E., they mean). Jacob Baker will say: "There is the only answer, the U. F. W. A." . . . Claude Babcock will say: "There is only one answer, the U. C. S. E." . . . Luther Steward will say: "There is only one answer, the N. F. F. E." . . . and so on. But to quote the announcement again:

"As you know, President Roosevelt has sanctioned Federal employe unionization. Therefore why not show at least as much interest in your own future as the President does?"

Mardi Gras Merriment To Reach Peak Today

New Orleans, Feb. 28 (AP).—Carefree Rex and his horde of merry-makers were at the gates of New Orleans today, ready to storm the city tomorrow with Mardi Gras merriment.

Claims on Fidelity To Be Met Today

Shareholders in the old Fidelity Building and Loan Association will begin receiving dividends this morning through the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, it was announced yesterday. Approximately 500 shareholders who have received notification cards may call at the new association's offices and exchange evidence of ownership in the old organization for shares in the Federal group on a basis of 85 per cent of their former holdings.

Officials of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association pointed out that Fidelity shareholders may receive cash for their claims if they desire. However, it was believed the majority would accept shares in the new association.

Shareholders will be notified at the rate of 500 daily when they may turn in their claims. It was emphasized no claims will be considered out of their turn.

Pa. Court Upholds State 'Wagner Act'

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Dauphin County Court upheld the Pennsylvania "Little Wagner" labor act today, but rebuked the Labor Relations Board for "prejudiced" conduct at a hearing.

Judge John E. Fox upheld the right of workers to organize and bargain collectively as provided by the act of the 1937 Legislature, which set up the board with authority to order reinstatement of employes it found had been discharged for union activity.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Girl Attempt Reform of Man Who Drinks Since Wife Left Him? They Met on 'Blind Date.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl who, by the loss of my mother before I was 2 years old, has been deprived of the motherly advice so many girls receive. Bank failures robbed me of a college education. At 17, I was forced to enter the business world, thereby losing the fatherly advice I needed so badly. I have followed what doctrines my father instilled into me. At present, I am confronted with a problem on which I need advice, and am turning to you.

* * * *

About a month ago, on a blind date, I met a young man who became very much interested in me, and we began having dates every week-end. I learned that he took up drinking about nine months ago. On our last date, he advised me that he was married, the father of two children, and that his wife walked out on him about nine months ago. He has not obtained a divorce and is undecided about it. He does not wish to sever our friendship. For various reasons, I could not marry him. I am only interested to the extent that I want to help him stop drinking, as I have helped several others.

* * * *

The question is: Shall I continue seeing him until I know whether I can or cannot help him? Or should I stop seeing him immediately? I would also like to talk his problem over with his mother, but I refuse to call upon her without a direct invitation. Please advise me as soon as possible. Sincerely, VONNIE.

Foolhardy Ambition.

DEAR VONNIE: The young man's alcoholic enslavement and his marital difficulties are none of your business and you will do well to remember that fact. You are gratuitously asking for trouble in assuming any responsibility whatsoever for his actions. If he doesn't see the wisdom of living a self-displinary, socially acceptable existence for its own sake and for its all-'round benefits to himself, it is extremely unlikely he will ever do it for your sake.

* * * *

Only those persons who are specially trained for the vocations of healing minds, bodies and spirits are —ranted in attempting to bring about a chance-met man's salvation or reformation—and such persons include physicians, psychiatrists, ministers of the Gospel, social welfare workers and so on. There is no place on the list for sentimental, romantic, gullible, impressionable young ladies who are more apt than not to be vanquished by, rather than to obtain victory over, the frailties they mistakenly attempt to wrestle with.

* * * *

Authorities on human relationships are virtually unanimous in warning women against attempts to reform weak and wayward men. Over and over again, they advise young persons to avoid, as companions, those individuals whose character and conduct do not immediately compel respect and approval. It's the old story: "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear," no matter how hard you try, nor how passionately you wish it might be accomplished.

* * * *

It is a form of vanity which prompts many women to undertake this inspirational role in a man's life. With others, it is sheer loneliness for masculine companionship, so that they seize too eagerly on whatever goods the gods provide, and, when they find it sleazy and stained and shoddy, instead of rejecting it forthwith as worthless trash (as they should do), they go on trying to darn and patch and dye and turn it into something presentable and useful. Yet the time they waste on it could be ever so much better spent in keeping their eyes open for a real bargain in human values.

* * * *

I think it would be rashly impertinent of you to presume to discuss this man's weaknesses with his mother, supposing she did invite you to her home, which is highly unlikely under the circumstance. After all, he is a married man, even though living apart from his wife, and I think the very fact that you are willing to accept him as a social escort, knowing the situation and his weaknesses, would cause his mother to regard you, somewhat pityingly, as a fool, rather than as a potential source of wise and helpful suggestion. She would very probably feel—and justifiably—that here was a case of the blind trying to lead the blind.

* * * *

My advice to you is to stop seeing the man, before you become emotionally, as well as imaginatively, involved with him. Your concern with him is more sentimental than sensible. Console yourself with the reflection that he has a wife and a mother, as well as other relatives, and many friends of longer standing, to look after his well-being. Where they have failed, you probably never could succeed. The whole tone of your letter suggests a person more in need of guidance than one who is equipped to provide guidance to another who has lost his balance and sense of direction.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

DINNER

Rice, tuna, and cheese casserole
Buttered peas
Stewed celery
Hot rolls, plum jelly
Loganberry marshmallow mousse

The recipe for rice, tuna, and cheese casserole was submitted in The Post recipe contest by Mrs. Christine B. Sparks, 2523 Seventeenth street northeast and Miss Agnes P. Rhodes, 2515 Thirteenth street northwest.

Rice, tuna, and cheese casserole

2 cups of cooked rice
1 seven ounce can of tuna fish
¼ pound of American cheese
2 cups of white sauce

Make a white sauce by melting two tablespoons of butter and slowly stirring into it 4 tablespoons of flour, 1½ teaspons of salt, and pepper to taste. Mix well. Slowly add 2 cups of milk and heat to boiling point. Add the grated cheese and stir into the sauce until all the cheese is melted.

Grease the casserole with butter and add a layer of rice, a layer of tuna fish (rinse the fish in hot water to take away the excess oil) and a layer of sauce until ingredients are all used. Dot top with butter and bake in a medium oven about 20 minutes. Save enough sauce in double boiler to top each serving. This serves six persons.

Spring Fashion Emphasizes Use Of Ornaments

Accessories Lend Touch of Sentiment, Femininity to Simple Suits.

By Ethel Ehlen
The Post Fashion Editor.

ACCESSORIES are taking the lead in fashions for spring. This is a season when frocks and suits are noted for simplicity; consequently accents are needed to express the current vogue for femininity and sentiment. With the numerous styles in costume jewelry, tinted gloves, exotic handbags and variety in the millinery scene, one can become sweetly feminine or sophisticated by turn, by a mere change of accessory theme.

It seems imperative that you decorate your suit lapel with glittering or amusing clips or pins. Such as bugs of various kinds in gold or silver finish made glittering with colored stones; a scintillating thistle or African daisy; multi-colored clips in triangular or disc shapes; miniature felt hats in the season's latest interpretations; twin hat pins; clusters of vari-colored flowers or the little bluebells which have been made famous again by a Paris designer.

Costume Jewelry.

For your business or afternoon dresses, there are huge pins to wear under your chin—costume jewelry, much of it having the appearance of rare old museum pieces. These are matched with one or several bracelets. For V-necklines and other styles which do not adapt themselves to pins and clips, wear strands of colored beads. The touch of pink for black and navy is smartly expressed here by pink pearls, coral, or pale pink composition beads. A clip on the hat with matching bracelet or lapel clip is another popular method of adding a bit if dazzle and interest to the spring costume.

The best way to change the appearance of your hat and give your suit, frock or coat the popular feminine slant is by the addition of a veil. Veils by the way, may match or contrast with the hat; colored-dotted veils are also much in the spotlight. Tinted suede and doeskin gloves come in lovely new colors, in classic slip-ons, or trimmed with novelty cuffs. They are ideal "match mates" for hats, scarfs or bags of the same color and material.

MOONSTONE jewelry by Alberta, to give a note of elegance to simple ensembles. The brooch is of alternate circles of moonstones and rhinestones; the flexible bracelet matches. Gibson Girl hat emphasizes this new old-fashioned trend.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Office Hausfrau.

IF AND WHEN a dictator takes over this country, women had better look to their desk tops. For it is a fetish of the masculine executive mind that the tops of women employe's desks should be kept as clean and shining as a ballroom floor.

Consequently forehanded women would do well to read an article in the Journal of Home Economics on "Office Housekeeping" by Laura B. Hadley. As one whose own desk is usually in the neutral class—not exactly a bird's nest, yet certainly not suitable for roller skating—I learned many valuable things from Miss Hadley. From now on I am going to make a determined effort always to put things where they belong and never, never to lay them down to "put away later." I am also going to be very strong-minded about not letting material I am not using accumulate about my desk. And I am certainly going to shut my eyes and consign to the wastebasket many handsome and important looking documents.

There Are Limits To Tidying

I will do that much and no more. I will not, I hereby serve notice, "keep pencils, erasers, ink, pins, thumb tacks, rubber bands, inside the desk." For I do all my arm and shoulder exercises to music and do not care to practice them by opening and shutting desk drawers. Moreover, I shall probably continue to stick little memoranda under the edge of my blotters and I shall keep books, handbag, picture postcards from friends on Caribbean cruises and whatever other personal paraphernalia I choose on my desk while I am working. Why not? I have no framed pictures of my wife and kiddies, no expensive tobacco humidors, no bronze Scottie paper weights.

There is really such a thing as going too far in this mania for desk neatness. Too much is expected of women along that line, especially by men executives who can always clear their own desks of letters, memoranda, illustrated booklets, fat envelopes, etc., by the simple device of handing them to secretaries and file clerks. Moreover, these executives don't have to pull out the file drawers every time they need one of these papers.

Must Pull Rabbit Out of Hat

The average woman worker must keep at her desk an assortment of goods that would stock a dime museum. Here are some of them:

Office supplies—For herself, her boss, and her borrowing men colleagues.

Beauty aids—Make-up box (how long would she last with a shiny nose?); mirror (Heaven help her if she hopes to catch a glimpse of herself in the one in the office restroom); probably an electric curling iron if her permanent is getting old.

Sewing kit—Mending cotton (most employers abhor runs in stockings); thread (slips that sag are men's particular aversion); buttons (the little woman in the office should always have them on tap).

First aids—Aspirin; glass for bromo-seltzers; other simple things such as peroxide, camphor, and spot remover.

Flowers—A potted plant or a rosebud (it makes things cheerier and demonstrates the career woman has retained her love for the beautiful).

Miscellany—All the little odds and ends not valuable enough to file nor worthless enough to throw away.

Naturally, under such conditions the office employe finds her desk life similar to that of a housewife in a one-room kitchenette with a husband and two children.

Desks, Like Houses, Have Their Uses

Miss Hadley quotes a successful executive as saying: "I judge the people whose offices I visit by the condition of their desks. I believe the order with which a person manages her papers and materials is an evidence of her orderliness of mind."

I wager that executive was a man. And, while I admit the general truth of the statement, I submit that the top of a woman's—or even a man's—desk is not the entire index of character. One of the best executives I ever knew kept old shoes and fishing tackle in his desk. One of the worst sat up and studied his own reflection in the mahogany.

If a man has a 100 per cent smooth desk top, one of four things is likely to be true: (1) He is a high-paid executive who has someone else to do his detail. (2) He is a fussy old woman who probably noses around in his wife's bureau drawers. (3) He is a robot lacking in creative imagination. (4) He is a small-timer obsessed with the idea of looking like an executive in the movies.

As to women: Well, I've seen housewives with perfect kitchens who themselves were bores, shrews and nitwits. I've seen others who let a few papers get on the floor, yet who were homemakers in the highest sense of the term. Houses are kept or lived in. Desks are kept or worked at.

Treatment of Skin.

Every so often we hear of a new remedy for that very common and troublesome skin disease, psoriasis. One gets to be a little skeptical because the successful tretament of psoriasis is so difficult, but, as the Journal of the American Medical Association says, the recent report of Cedar and Zon is arresting for that very reason.

Treatment is by the use of large doses of Vitamin D. It is quite probable that in many instances our bodily supply of vitamin D becomes very low. We know from experience with children on the verge of rickets that it is very difficult to keep it high. The dosage of vitamin D used in this treatment is tremendous, as much as 30,000 units a day.

The first case in which it was used was a case of chronic arthritis in which vitamin D was given in large doses. The patient incidentally had a psoriasis which cleared up a good deal more promptly than the arthritis. It was tried after this in 15 cases. Eleven of these patients had complete disappearance of the skin eruption within 6 to 12 weeks. The psoriasis recurred gradually in two or three months in all but four of the recovered patients. However, the recurring eruptions were not as severe as the original ones, and one case in which the treatment was twice repeated over an eight to ten week period obtained complete disappearance again.

Great care had to be exercised in order to prevent a dangerous increase in the amount of vitamin D in the body. Vitamin D, as is known, is capable of increasing the calcium in the blood, so careful studies were carried out in connection with the administration to see that the blood calcium was not greatly increased. No harm, however, appeared to be done in patients by these large doses, and patients who are badly troubled with chronic widespread psoriasis, who can find a physician to co-operate with them, might get considerable benefit from such a treatment.

The treatment is described in Public Health Reports for November 5, 1937.

Japanese Adopt A Simple Life

War Ends Costly Gifts and Wedding Rites.

A simple, economical mode of living, made necessary by war, is supplanting the ornate home life of the Japanese. Elaborate, costly wedding ceremonies, expensive holiday celebrations, the custom of giving gifts far beyond one's means may become a mere legend, according to Mrs. Haruko Ischiwaka, Japanese author, who is in the United States preparing a companion volume to her book published last spring, "Japanese Lady in Europe." The book resulted from her travels with her husband, head of the English department of the Imperial University, in Tokyo.

A further change brought about by the war, as seen by Mrs. Ischiwaka, is a greater solidarity of home life for the residents of Tokyo. "Outwardly," she states, "the visitor to Tokyo would observe no change since the war, except the women one sees embroidering belts for soldiers. These are wide flannel strips covered with red French knots and are called thousand-person stitches. They are supposed to keep the soldier from harm.

"There is, of course, an undercurrent of tenseness and the strain on family finances because of the 20 per cent rise in food prices, as well as the high cost of cotton and wool. But the wave of economy has served as an opportunity for ending expensive customs which many feel we have outgrown. And women feel they may now be abandoned forever."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

WANDERERS through the local theater alleys have noted one definite and unhappy lack this year. Not a show-shop marquee in the district bears the magic line, "Katherine Cornell in 'Hearts and Flowers.'" And when this front-line lady of the native drama is not casting her rays over the Broadway scene, it is a season missing on one very vital cylinder!

ALICE HUGHES.

For Kate the Great is enjoying her first real long vacation this winter, due to the fact that her projected world tour blew up because of the agonies that afflict so many foreign parts. So this remarkable woman is spending a happy, restful holiday at her lovely home on Beekman place—and thither we all rushed for a visit the other day, our excuse being the fortieth birthday of La Cornell. And there she sat, all ease and graciousness, before a fireplace burning real logs that smelled mighty nice. And we chattered of many things.

She certainly doesn't look her 40, and she says she doesn't feel it. "I'm not conscious of my age," in her own words. "And now I'm reading a lot of plays very carefully. I have one called 'The Ivory Fan,' which I think very beautiful, but I have no definite plans. I only know that I'll be there on the stage again, acting. I haven't been to the theater much—it disturbs me, but I go to the movies often. I can relax there, and films are a great mental purge. And the audiences are very interesting, because they are so critical. I saw a picture the other day where the crowd mocked the actors and the lines!" She herself has consistently refused to surrender to Hollywood's charms and huge pay-checks.

In the spring she'll be off to her new home on Martha's Vineyard. We said goodby with regret to this lovely artist who so adorns the American stage. And we may still expect her greatest work from Katharine, now at the high peak of 40—tops for physical and creative vigor! Hurry home, Cornell!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We're in quite a state about the Grand Duchess Marie, top girl of our small but active Rooshian colony, white, not red. She works here, loves Paris and London, and now the Romanoff lady has been made a Swedish citizen by that nice old King Gustav, whose idea of a wild debauch is tennis on the Riviera. I've decided that we must give her American dollars to spend, kiss her hand because she's a real Romanoff, and offer her shreds of herring to munch at parties. A real woman of the world like that is a problem child, all right . . .

The noisiest squawk raised by Americans abroad is the dearth of real good cawfeee! A famous local goody-shop solves this by now peddling fine java all made, bottled in splits, and ready to reheat! What a coup, or coo! Instead of a case of bubbly wine, just send your departing girl-friend a case of real good cawfee. She'll enjoy it with a real good French croissant for breakfast, and thus start her day in Paris filled with ginger and pep and coffee!

* * * *

Over 90,000 children of our island were put over the jumps the other day to pick the most polite, and Miss Rose Bader, 13, copped the silver mug. Here's how the Queen of Politeness would ask for a slug of water when visiting her Aunt Hattie—"Excuse me for interrupting you, Aunt, but please may I take a drink now, for I'm thirsty?" Sort of overdone, don't you fancy? By the way, the tests showed that very few babes from the Borough of the Bronx indulged in that vulgar noise known as "The Bronx Cheer," or "Raspberry."

* * * *

Further note on the "Snow White" madness. In the book line, various editions of the Walt Disney version are selling about 50,000 copies a day, and the total sales are already in the millions. "Snow White Whips Recession" is my new headline.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Exercise From Wrong Posture May Do More Harm Than Good.

By Ida Jean Kain.

GET A good start with your exercise. If you start from the wrong posture you cannot expect calisthenics to turn you into a beauty. As a matter of fact, exercise in slumped posture may do more harm than good—it may give you a double chin and a sway back!

You waste time when you exercise spasmodically or haphazardly, but exercise in the wrong position is worse than a waste of time. What it does is strengthen the muscles in an incorrect position and the results are likely to be just the opposite of desirable.

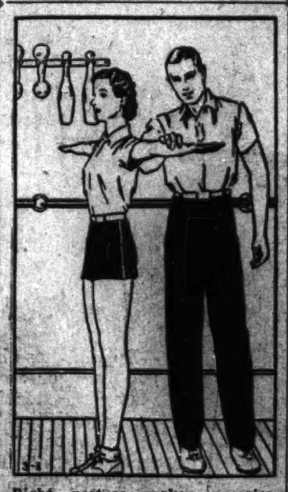
Posture discipline not only strengthens the muscles for the maintenance of correct posture at all times but it also markedly increases the effectiveness of an exercise. Definite posture rules are most important to your exercise program. As you go through your daily doses keep the following in mind:

1. Hold the head well up. As you work up momentum in certain exercises there is a tendency to let the head poke forward. This tendency must be counteracted by pulling up with the muscles at the sides and back of the neck.

Keep Shoulders Back.

2. At all times have the shoulders back but never hunched up or rigid. Raising the shoulders produces muscular tension and interferes with freedom of movement.

3. Keep the chest up—and up does not mean out. This lift of the chest should originate in the lower abdominal wall and extend through the chest, strengthening all trunk muscles.



Right posture makes exercise more effective.

4. In specific exercise the line of pull is directed to a particular group of muscles. One part of the body participates in the movement and the other parts may be perfectly still. For example, in twisting exercises to slim the waist you do not turn the hips as you twist at the waist. Or, when the arms are propelled forward and backward from shoulder to strengthen the pectoral muscles and improve the bust you do not swing the body from the waist. Otherwise, the exercise would lose its effectiveness.

5. Select your exercise program carefully to correct any posture fault. If you have a pronounced sway back avoid all backward bending and back kicking exercises. Do those in which you bend forward, arching the back. When shoulders droop forward arm circling should be backward.

Hold Head Well Up, Shoulders Back but Never Rigid.

Combined with the requisite enthusiasm and persistence these posture rules can help you to get the most out of exercise. Only five minutes of daily exercise can make an improvement in your figure, and you will be delighted with the results of a 30 minutes' program. As the muscles are strengthened bulges and posture faults vanish.

Aside from checking up on your posture during exercise put into constant practice the rule that, whether short of tall, you will live up to every inch of your height.

March Social Calendar Studded With Musicales

Omen Seen as February Bows Out With Event at Italian Embassy Featured by Marie Carreras and Signor Barera.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

If March roars linion-like through its first week, there will be music to calm its savage breast. If it bounds along like a lamb, there will be soft tunes to carol its gamboling. Society will see to that. A glimpse of the calendar for the next few days indicates that musicales are to be the favored diversion of this month.

By way of preparation, February blew out last night to the tune of a top-flight concert that drew a host of social notables and political celebrities to the Italian Embassy. Marie Carreras, widely known Italian pianist, and her countryman, Orlando Barera, famous violinist, shared the program and the honors. Signor Barera has been presented twice—once this season and once season before last—at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's musical mornings; and many music lovers in last night's audience had heard him both here and in New York.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The third artist was Hubert Giesen, accompanist, who gained enviable acclaim when he toured for a season with Yehudi Menuhin. The varied program Mr. Giesen and his fellow artists presented last night brought forth more than polite applause. From the first to the concluding number, the audience patently approved the selections and their interpretation. As would be expected, one of the most enthusiastic spectators was Mrs. Townsend.

She was not only part of the audience, but also a participant in the program before it was over. When Signor Barera had finished his last number with Mr. Giesen, the ovation would have tempted any artist into giving an encore. He gave two—with Mrs. Townsend playing the accompaniment, in a manner that made her friends prouder of her than ever. According to present plans, Mrs. Townsend and her husband will leave tomorrow for a Florida vacation.

Last evening's host and hostess, the Italian Ambassador and his wife received in the drawing room. Donna Matilde wore a frock of pale blue slipper satin fashioned on simple lines, with a fluted band outlining the top of the bodice.

The program was given in the spacious ballroom where rice tapestries and oil paintings made a colorful setting for the event. Rows of gilt chairs were quickly filled by the guests. Following the concert, the company drifted toward the buffet where champagne and other refreshments were served.

Morgenthaus Are Among the Guests

Glimpsed in the crowd were diplomats, a Cabinet member, a sprinkling of Senators, a number of residential social lights and several out-of-towners.

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., were there; also, Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, and Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings. The Ambassador of Peru, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was on hand for the music and the reception that preceded and followed it; also the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. V. A. L. Mallet, and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Blair, of New York, who are house guests of Mrs. Blair's mother, Mrs. Lee P. Warren, and Mrs. Crosby Miller, of Washington and Warrenton, Va., who was gowned in white satin.

Social Notables Are There in Ful Force

Miss Mabel Boardman, wearing a blue and silver brocaded gown beneath a fox cape, was among the later arrivals as were the Swiss Minister and Mme. Marc Peter and the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom. Miss Wayne Chatfield-Taylor was noted among the guests. She wore red velvet. Also there were Countess van der Straten-Ponthon, Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, the latter in green and silver lame; Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Mrs. Truxson Beale, in white satin; Senator Arthur Capper, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Miss Rebecca Wellington, in a gray chiffon frock; the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Vladimir Hurban, Ralph Snowden Hill and Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Waltman.

Others were Mme. Edgar Prochnik, who sat with Mrs. J. Fred Essary; Hector Leguizamon, Countess Roberti, in blue; Miss Mary Patten and Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil.

Edwin A. Halseys Are Concert Guests Of Fonnie B. Ladd

The Secretary of the Senate and Mrs. Edwin A. Halsey were guests of honor at a box party given by Fonnie Black Ladd at Miss Grace Moore's Sunday concert. Col. Halsey was on the staff of Mr. Ladd's cousin, the late Gov. William Hodges Mann of Virginia, and Miss Moore, who in private life is Mrs. Valentin Parera, has been a lifelong friend of Mr. Ladd and his family in the South. Following the concert, Miss Moore received members of the box party.

The guests, in addition to Col. and Mrs. Halsey, included the Judge Advocate General and Mrs. Allen Gullion, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Beaty, Mr. and Mrs. Pryor Spencer Bailey, jr., of Oakland, Miss., who are in Washington for the winter, and Mme. Gustav Orlicz-Dreszer, of Warsaw, Poland.

Other members of the box party were Miss Dorothy Moss, of Louisville, Ky.; Miss Margaret Purdom, of Hazard, Ky.; Miss Lelia Mae Stiles, Miss Junea Culbertson and Miss Helene Kravatz.

Saitos Honored By Brewsters

The Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito and the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler were ranking guests at a dinner given by Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster last evening at the Sulgrave Club.

The party took place in the ballroom, decorated for the occasion with a profusion of spring flowers. Six tables for eight guests were arranged in the open rectangle formed by the larger table at which covers were laid for 18. The hostess wore a frock with an accordion pleated skirt of brown crepe and a fitted bodice of ecru lace made with a square neck and cap sleeves. A blue fox cape and a corsage completed her costume.

Among the 66 guests, in addition to those already mentioned, were Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine, and Representative and Mrs. Bertrand Snell, and Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard.

Bulgarian Envoy Dinner Guest of Mr. and Mrs. Close

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close entertained at a dinner last evening at which the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff were ranking guests.

Also in the company were the retiring Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, who sail Thursday for England, and Willem Dirkse van Schalkwyk, Attache of the South African legation who is leaving this week for his new post in Canada.

First Lady Aids Choral Concert

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of patronesses for the seventh annual Lenten Concert of the A Capella Choir of the First Congregational Church. The event will take place in Constitution Hall on Monday evening, March 14, at 8:30. Mrs. William B. Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, is another patroness.

Among the boxholders will be Mrs. Harland Fiske Stone, Lady Marler, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mrs. Charles L. McNary and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss. The program will be under the direction of Ruby Smith Stahl.

MRS. JAMES HURD HUGHES, wife of Senator Hughes, of Delaware, entertained hundreds of guests at an "at home" yesterday in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

SENATOR HATTIE CARAWAY attends cocktail parties about as often as Vice President Garner goes to dinner. But since she took up the Big Apple from Eleanor Powell and Ray Bolger a few weeks ago the lady from Arkansas seems to be stepping out, and yesterday was among those present at the five-to-seven function given by the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen.

DUDLEY HARMON.

However, the nonalcoholically inclined Senator still refuses to drink anything stronger than milk and yesterday found her ignoring the Manhattans and Martinis and concentrating on tomato and orange juice. She was accompanied by her son, Lieut. Caraway. They are neighbors of the Thomsens on Colorado avenue, and the two families got to know each other when a huge tree in the Senator's yard was blown by a terrific storm over into Thomsen territory.

YESTERDAY'S PARTY was a pleasant mixture of all ages and sets. There was Lady Lister-Kaye, resplendent with usual huge corsage of purple orchids; Donna Matilde de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador, looking much rested after her stay in the hospital; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, the Prochniks, the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Southgate.

In the living room were glimpsed, at one time or another, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, Countess Roberti, the Herbert Blankenhorns and Frau Herbert Scholz from the German Embassy; Mrs. William T. Mann, Mrs. Crosby Miller, Miss Stellita Stapleton, Mrs. William MacCracken, Mme. van Haersma de With and Miss Nora de With, who will entertain at a cocktail party Saturday in honor of her weekend guest, the son of a former Dutch Minister here; Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Baron Paul Schell, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sims, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, Ralph Hill and others.

GOOD DELAWAREANS streamed over to the Mayflower yesterday afternoon for the reception given by Mrs. James Hughes, wife of the Senator from that State. Receiving with the hostess was Mrs. George Messersmith, whose husband is Assistant Secretary of State, and who is from Wilmington. An uncle of hers was Governor there when Senator Hughes was serving as Secretary of State for Delaware.

A number of Senatorial wives were present, including Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. William McAdoo, Mrs. Arthur Vandenburg and Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis. Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Mrs. J. Fred Essary and the two daughters of the hostess, Mrs. W. Oakman Hay, jr., and Mrs. John Patrick Martin were among those assisting.

WANTED: A young lady between 16 and 21, about 5 feet 2 inches in height, a blonde preferred, but not required—to attend the next Saturday and Sunday musical show and dance at the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

A request for such a paragon, who, it seems, must have everything but eyes of blue, was sent us by a plebe at the academy, who has a passion for anonymity as far as getting his name in the paper is concerned.

His letter says: "Being a plebe, quite a few things are forced upon me, and it seems that at the present time I am confronted with an almost impossible task. I have read your articles in The Washington Post quite frequently and as it happened was reading the morning paper when the big bad wolf (an upperclassman) approached me. 'Mr. ——,' he said, 'I am expecting you to drag (naval slang for escort) the most beautiful girl to be seen with a plebe on this occasion.' . . . As yet the date for the musical show has not been set, but it will probably be the second or third week in March. Miss Harmon, I place myself at your mercy and will appreciate any information that you can render me concerning the whereabouts of Miss X."

Anybody who thinks she can live up to these rather stringent requirements is invited to write to this column. Her qualifications will be forwarded to the questing plebe.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Roosevelt will return from New York to attend the dinner which members of the Cabinet will give Friday evening in honor of the President and his wife.

Sir George and Lady McLaren Brown, of Hamilton, Canada, are in Washington at the Carlton. They are leaving today for a brief tour but will return in a fortnight.

Mrs. Edward Pou Guest Of Mrs. Clinton Tribby

Mrs. Edward Pou, of Smithfield, N. C., was the guest in whose honor Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby entertained 20 women at a bridge luncheon yesterday in her apartment at the Westchester. Mrs. Pou, who has been widely feted since her recent arrival in Washington, is the house guest of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas A. Walden.

Yesterday's luncheon party was one in a series Mrs. Tribby is giving this season. The next, scheduled for Friday, March 11, will honor Mrs. John E. Miller, wife of the junior Senator from Arkansas.

Pen Women Give A Drama Written By Mrs. Anderson

Back into town for a brief stay in her Massachusetts avenue home, Mrs. Larz Anderson, whose late husband was United States Ambassador to Japan, will attend the premiere of her play, "The Bridge of Rama," at the Grafton Hotel Friday night. It is to be presented both Friday and Saturday evening by the Laboratory Little Theater of the District Branch of the National League of American Pen Women.

"The Bridge of Rama" is one of the latest of many plays Mrs. Anderson has written. Last season, another—"The Gold Madonna"—was produced by the same group with signal success.

Mrs. Anderson, who spends much of her time in her home near Boston, is at present working on a new play.

"The Bridge of Rama" is set in India and is based on the colorful legend of the rescue of the goddess, Sita, and her return from captivity to her husband, Rama, and to their palace high in the Himalayas. On one of her many trips to India Mrs. Anderson heard the legend that inspired her play.

Although the schedule plans for her stay in Washington is not definite, Mrs. Anderson expects to be here for several days.

Rep. O'Day Says Hail, Farewell At Striking Fete

Table Half a Block Long Is Loaded at Reception at Carlton.

Hails and farewells were said by Representative Caroline O'Day, who chose the Carlton Hotel as the scene of her reception yesterday afternoon. From now on she will be "living in a suitcase" between Washington and Albany, with the New York State constitutional convention keeping her on the constant go.

However, there was nothing hurried in her manner yesterday as, gowned in a floor-length black dress, trimmed with silver fringe, she graciously greeted guest after guest in the long line of those who attended the function at which she was hostess par excellence. Receiving with her was her daughter, Elia O'Day, also in black.

One of the most unusual buffets the social season has seen in Washington this year practically filled the north room of the hotel. In the center of the table, which must have been at least a half block long, was a miniature fountain, glowing with concealed lights.

Many Circles of Society Present

On the arrival of Mrs. Cordell Hull, smartly attired with a cape of silver fox over her shoulders, what almost amounted to another receiving line sprang up at the western corner of the room. Seen chatting with Mrs. Hull was Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock in a black dress banded with gold and a small black hat trimmed with a soft green feather; Mrs. Preston McGoodwin in a black suit with a three-quarter length coat; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers in a floor-length dress of China red, and Senora de los Rios in black, the bodice of her gown being black net and lace.

Mrs. James M. Fitzpatrick, wife of Representative Fitzpatrick, of New York, was among those who poured early in the afternoon. She was in black with a narrow shawl collar of white. Others who assisted were Mrs. Thomas Burke in a stunning black dress fashioned with a bolero and trimmed with a sash of soft spring print; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross also in black; Mrs. Harry W. Blair in black, with a small, close-fitting hat; Mrs. Blair Banister, Representative Nan W. Honeyman, of Oregon; Mrs. Hugh Peterson, wife of Representative Peterson, of Georgia, and Representative Rogers.

Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Sol Bloom, arrived quite early, chatted for a few moments and then hurried on—doubtless to another party. She wore a cape of furs, Mme. Marc Peter, in black with a large bow on her coat, entered the room with Mme. de Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal, and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings in brown furs and a dark wine-colored dress held a little court of her own.

Mrs. Tydings Among Guests

Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of Senator Tydings, of Maryland, was present, as was Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, in very dark green, who arrived with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Bohn. Others at the party were Mme. Alexander Troyanovsky, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Fred Bierman, wife of Representative Bierman, of Iowa, she in a stunning Spanish-looking hat; Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, wife of Representative Ford, of California; Representative Mary T. Norton, who was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Marion McDonnell, and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

While the ladies almost had the floor at the beginning of the tea, more and more gentlemen appeared later. Among them were the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, and Herbert Feis.

Highest U. S. Officials to Fete Sultan of Muscat and Oman

Visitor to Be Luncheon Guest of President; Will Dine With Secretary Hull and Sumner Welles Thursday and Friday.

A program full of partying and sightseeing has been outlined for the Sultan of Muscat and Oman, who will arrive in Washington Thursday for a three-day visit.

Accompanying him will be H. B. Bader, aide-de-camp to the Sultan, and A. M. Zawawi, secretary to Sultan. The official party will be escorted around Washington by George T. Summerlin, the State Department's Chief of Protocol; Capt. W. K. Kilpatrick, American naval aide to the Sultan, and Col. John A. Crane, American Military Aide to the Sultan.

The visiting dignitary is scheduled to arrive at Union Station at 11 a. m. Thursday. He will be formally received by the Secretary of State, the Chief of Staff, the Chief of Naval Operations, the commandant of the Marine Corps, Marvin H. McIntyre, the Undersecretary of State, the Chief and Assistant Chief of the Division of Near Eastern Affairs and the commandant general of the Washington Provisional Brigade.

From Union Station he will go with a special motor car escort to the Willard Hotel, where he will stay during his visit. He will have luncheon with the President Thursday and dinner with the Secretary of State that evening at the Carlton.

Friday he will be a luncheon guest of Col. J. M. Wainwright at Fort Myer, and that afternoon will be guest of honor at the exhibition drill of the Third Cavalry and Sixteenth Field Artillery at Fort Myer. That evening, he will be feted at a dinner given by the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, at the Sulgrave Club.

Saturday, as on the other days, he will be taken on a round of sightseeing which will include two visits to the Washington Navy Yard. At noon the official party will board the Secretary of Navy's yacht, Sequoia, for a trip to Mount Vernon and will have luncheon on route. The next day the Sultan will depart.

Incidentally, his sightseeing schedule, which gets under way at 3 p. m. Thursday at the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will include a long drive around the city. The only evening at which he is not "dated up" by the State Department for a dinner is Saturday.

Ridleys Honored At Bailey Dinner

Senator and Mrs. Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, entertained at a dinner last evening at the Mayflower in honor of the Governor of the Panama Canal and Mrs. Clarence S. Ridley. The Ridleys are staying at the Mayflower during a visit to Washington.

Among those present at the dinner were Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George, of Georgia; Senator Tom Connally, of Texas; Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia; Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin; Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet, of Rhode Island; Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Representative and Mrs. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, and Representative J. Walter Lambeth, of North Carolina.

District D. A. R. Attacks Prison Parole System

37th Annual Conference Also Goes on Record in Favor of Caraway Bill to Codify Existing Flag Rules.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Members of the District Daughters of the American Revolution at their thirty-sevent annual conference yesterday at Memorial Continental Hall, went on record opposing the present system of paroling criminals and also indorsed Senator Hattie Caraway's bill providing for the codification of existing flag rules.

Yesterday's meeting was chiefly devoted to reports of the officers and committee chairmen. Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, State chairman of National Defense Through Patriotic Education, reporting on the investigation made by her committee as to textbooks used in the local schools, declared that, although some of those considered objectionable had been dropped, "there still remain some which it is believed should be removed. The magazine Scholastic which the school board has again allowed in the schools, should, we feel, be eliminated, as, in our opinion, it has been a source of propaganda against military training and carried reviews of books of an indecent nature."

Mrs. Holzberg recommended the District of Columbia continue the investigation of textbooks in the schools next year and appeal to members to be more alert and to investigate subversive activities more diligently.

Mrs. Edwin J. Ryan, chairman of motion pictures, reported that, "in response to our challenge that the motion picture industry bring forth films of improved moral tone and social value, the producers have asked the public to prove the sincerity of its demand by supporting the vastly higher type of picture that has so largely replaced the earlier offerings."

The Daughters of the American Revolution were called upon by their District State regent, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, to do their "individual best with honest convictions for the immediate present, in order to preserve the past. We should accept the challenge of our forefathers and foremothers to teach, to build, to educate and to understand the growing american," she asserted, addressing the morning session of the State conference.

Mrs. Haig stressed the importance of interesting young women in the organization and offering a program of work which would appeal to them. Only through bringing in the younger generation, she pointed out, could the society be perpetuated and its work extended.

A gain of 199 new members, bringing the membership of the 60 chapters in the District of Columbia to 3,664, was reported by the State registrar, Mrs. Elmer Curry. The chapters have been active in philanthropic work, according to Mrs. Delos W. Thayer, chairman of the Ellis Island committee, who reported 21 boxes of material sent there, as well as a hand loom to the workshop at the Marine Hospital. Mrs. Roy C. Bowker reported contributions of $2,322.84 and 122 boxes of clothing to the mountain schools approved by the D. A. R.

Marcia Burns Chapter won the $10 prize offered by the magazine committee, of which Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke has been chairman, to the chapter obtaining the greatest number of subscriptions in proportion to its membership. Prizes of subscriptions to the magazine were announced as having been awarded by Susan Reviere Hetzel Chapter, of which Mrs. Creyke is a member, to Col. John Donelson Chapter and Sarah Franklin Chapter.

Mrs. Leslie C. Stevens, a member of the Army and Navy Chapter, who has just returned from Russia, addressed the meeting yesterday afternoon on the youth movement there. She contrasted conditions in the Soviet Union and the United States and declared her trip to Russia made her more conscious of the importance of teaching our children to be aware of the honor and responsibility of being Americans. In no other country of the world do children have the opportunity to study and play intelligently, she said.

This morning the president general, Mrs. William A. Becker, who is a guest at the conference, will be entertained at breakfast by the State committee chairmen at the Mayflower, and this afternoon will be guest of honor at a luncheon being given by the State Regents Club, of which Miss Luella P. Chase is president. The highlight of the conference will be the dedication of the tablet in memory of the signers of the Constitution at the Washington Cathedral this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Becker will address the conference at the closing dinner at the Wardman Park this evening. Voting for State officers will take place from 9 o'clock until noon.

Federation Told Parents Fear to Apply Discipline

Parents are afraid to discipline their children, in the opinion of Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, chairman of education for the General Federation of Women's Clubs and candidate for its first vice presidency, who yesterday addressed a meeting of the District of Columbia Federation at 2400 Sixteenth street northwest.

"During the past few months I have traveled in 35 States and visited in countless homes," said Mrs. Whitehurst, "and I am led to believe from my observation that mothers are afraid of their children; they have let them do as they please so as not to crush their 'individuality' and they are now afraid to put their feet down."

Mrs. Whitehurst, whose talk was greeted by frequent bursts of applause, declared organized womanhood was doing little about the crime situation which faces the Nation. She advocated compulsory character education in schools; education regarding the harmful effects of alcohol and narcotics; religious training emphasizing the moral code set forth in the Ten Commandments and intelligent discipline in the home as the first essentials.

"Women must shake off their apathy toward governmental affairs and assert their influence for the preservation of democracy," said Mrs. Whitehurst. "They must understand what constitutes our democracy and what it stands for in order to combat the influences which would undermine it."

She assailed the practice of presenting speakers on club programs who could be obtained free, because actually they were propagandists although they appeared in the guise of authorities on subjects of general interest. She warned women to beware of speakers who sing the praises of foreign dictatorships and other systems while they held up our own Government to criticism.

"What is the matter with the people, that they think we should have anything else than a democracy?" she asked.

Democracy can be preserved only through education, she declared, and set forth as other specific objectives, toward which club women should work: establishment of the merit system and elimination of the spoils system; vocational training in schools to combat unemployment among young people; emphasis on character education rather than the "crave for credits."

She was introduced by Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, president of the elimination of the spoils system: at the meeting which preceded the annual card party of the organization, at which nearly 400 played.

The program also included a tribute to Susan B. Anthony by Representative Virginia Jenckes, who presented Mrs. C. M. Lewis in a striking portrayal of the great crusader for equal rights. "Women have stopped wishing for better homes and city, State and Federal Government and are voting for these," said Mrs. Jenckes. "The Women will demand that their homes be protected by the best Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Corps the Government can provide," she declared.

She added that she was behind the women of the District in their campaign for a voice in the District government.

The federation voted yesterday to devote a fund of more than $2,000, accumulated toward a clubhouse, to a scholarship loan fund for a college student from the District, preferably one who has already completed two years of college and desires to finish. The resolution provided that the money could be recalled at any time for use toward building, for which it originally was intended.

Delegates to the triennial convention of the General Federation in Kansas City in May were elected at a morning session and included Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, Mrs. P. Keyser and Mrs. Charles A. Langley. Alternates named were Mrs. La Verne Beales, Mrs. Otto Hammerlin, Mrs. Jennie E. Wright and Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel.

Mrs. Daniel was chairman of the card party yesterday, with Mrs. Lloyd W. Morrison and Mrs. Beales assisting her. Mrs. Ernest Thompson was in charge of the cake table and Mrs. Thomas Atkeson, of the candy table, assisted by Mrs. Walter Jaeger, Mrs. James Sullivan and Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist.

Morley Speaks On Peace Here

Only a strong collective peace machinery can build up adequate resistance which can be relied on eventually to arrest the fever of aggression which has afflicted certain nations, Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, told members of the American Association of University Women yesterday. Mr. Morley addressed the clubub at its Monday afternoon tea, where he was asked to discuss the international situation as he did a few weeks ago at the conference on the Cause and Cure of War.

He called attention to the charges which had taken place since that time and pointed out that the rapid course of events in Europe and the Far East made it difficult to discuss the situation now as then.

With reference to Japan and Italy, he said, the case for the so-Italy, he said the case for the so-called "have not" nations could instead of developing the raw materials for which she claimed to have invaded Manchuria, using her additional resources to press on into China, and Italy, instead of developing Abyssinia, sending armies into Spain.

Mr. Morley was introduced by Mrs. Robert Olesen, chairman of the education department.

Among guests at the tea, which was one of the largest of the season, were Mrs. Richard Hogue, president of the club; Mrs. James Brown Scott, Mrs. Albert Barrows, Mrs. Clyde Hadley, Miss Ellen Vinton, Miss Louise Newell, Mrs. S. R. Newell, Mrs. A. Remington Kellogg, Mrs. M. E. Woodward, who had as her guest Mrs. Augustine Longergan, wife of Senator Lonergan, of Connecticut; Mrs. Robert Pickens, of Leesburg, Va., one of the club members, who was an assistant hostess; Mrs. Frank Edgington, Mrs. G. C. Anley, Miss Jessica Barr, Mrs. Louis Bauer, Miss Virginia Kinnard, Miss Ellen McBryde Brown, Mrs. Lawrence Radford, Miss Edna Clark, Mrs. J. 'An Adventure at Mt. Vernon' Given by Chevy Chase Women

Music and dancing of the colonial period combined with poetry, artistic settings and costumes yesterday in the presentation of "An Adventure at Mount Vernon" written by Bess Heath Olmstead and given by the music section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Olmstead, who is past president of the D. C. branch of the League of American Pen Women, took the role of narrator. The fantasy, which she wrote originally for the Lovette Choral Club, by which it was first presented, brings to life residents of Mount Vernon in George Washington's day. A visitor, portrayed by Mrs. Worthington C. McCreery, tarries at the historic house and sees the early festivities there in a dream.

Mrs. Nellie Barber Brooks played Nellie Custis; Mrs. George V. Graham, that of Martha Washington; Mrs. Holland Huntington, that of George Washington; Florence Holleman, that of a small boy; Marilyn Kimbrough Bryant, of a little girl. Mrs. Archer LeGrand Haycock, of the messenger, and Alden H. Emery, jr., the flutist.

The stage setting was arranged by Mrs. Brooks. After a short prologue by the narrator, the curtains parted revealing a piano, lighted by little candles in tiny candelabra. Mrs. Charles Imlay and Mrs. Roy Palmer, both in colonial costume, played Valse Brillante and Spanish Dance by Moszkowski, introducing the music of the period.

Songs of the era, sung by the Music Section under the direction of Myrtle Collins and accompanied by Constance Snow, completed the musical prelude. The numbers included "The Toast," written by Francis Hopkinson, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; "In These Delightful Pleasant Groves" (Purcell), "Spinning Song," "The Little Shepherd Boy" and Amaryllis" (Ghys).

The scene at Mount Vernon was a party at which Nellie Custis was entertaining some of her young friends while Martha and George Washington were hosts to their older ones. The minuet was danced by Williette Sprinkel, Millicent Vogel, Ann Bradley and Mary Hopkins; Alden Emery was called on for a solo on his silver flute; Little Marilyn Bryant and Florence Holleman presented a quaint dance; Williette Sprinkel and Mary Hopkins danced a gavotte and Mrs. Brooks presented two songs. There also were songs by a sextette from the music section chorus, the members of which were Mrs. William F. Henry, Mrs. Thomas F. Gulich, Mrs. Carl Oechsle, Mrs. Mylon Witters, Mrs. William Graham and Mrs. August Koehler. The songs were "Miss Nancy's Gown" (Chadwick), the Beethoven Minuet and "The Alphabet" by Mozart.

A large audience of club members and guests was present for the program, following which tea was served with Mrs. Olmstead, Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. George V. Graham pouring.

Mrs. Elmer Pusey, who was hostess for the afternoon, was assisted by Mrs. Hugh Murrel, Mrs. E. M. Jansky, jr., Mrs. Hazel Brown Piers and other members of the cast, who were in colonial costume, as well as by Mrs. Philip Gott, who is chairman of the section.

Chinese War Refugees to Get $5,000 From Benefit Function

Fashion Show of Ancient and Modern Oriental Costumes Highlights Combined Bridge Party and and Tea at Shoreham.

Approximately $5,000 will be added to the fund for relief of war refugees in China from the bridge party, fashion show and tea given yesterday by the Chinese Women's Association at the Shoreham Hotel. Hundreds attended, playing bridge and patronizing booths set up for the sale of tea, cakes, candies and Chinese wares.

Mrs. Z. T. Ing, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy, who was in charge of arrangements and busy supervising details of the party, wore a handsome black robe, embroidered in gold. Miss Yoeh Wang, eldest daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, who is president of the Chinese Women's Association, also was assisting generally. She and all of the other women of her country were dressed in their native robes, simply fashioned of heavy silk, beautifully embroidered. Mrs. Theodore Fong was in charge of prizes, Mrs. Y. P. Leon of the fashion show, Mrs. William Mayers of sales, assisted by Mrs. Louis Shapiro, Mrs. M. Bing, Mrs. Fred Rossiter, Mrs. J. R. Vincent, Miss Constance Warren and Mrs. William King. Mrs. Evelyn Yee was in charge of the broadcast held in connection with the affair, and decorations were arranged by Mrs. P. Hsiao, Mrs. Ida Lee and Mrs. Philip Lee. Mrs. Henry Albers was in charge of special prizes.

Four young Chinese girls, Meta Fong, Muriel and Babe Moy and Lois Ing, moved among guests with trays of interesting Chinese articles, which they sold during the bridge. Claire Aubry struck a European note, appearing in a French costume, selling cigarettes.

The fashion show of ancient and modern Chinese costumes was presented at 4:30. Miss Hilda Yen, in a modern white satin robe, with which she wore a short ermine cape, created a sensation. Among the ancient robes, that loaned by Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and worn by Miss Clara Loo was among the oldest and most interesting. Miss An-Fu Wang, daughter of the Ambassador, also wore an ancient robe and one of the most elaborate headdresses.

Among the others who modeled costumes were Miss Betty Wen, who wore a theatrical robe; Miss Ing and Miss Mary Lee.

A feature of the program which had not been announced beforehand was music late in the afternoon by a Chinese orchestra, which played four numbers composed for the occasion. The instruments included a Chinese organ, guitar, violin and banjo. The selections, which were written on the five-tone Chinese scale, interpreted in English were: "American-Chinese Friendship," "International Peace," "Opposo Aggression" and "Final Victory."

The benefit affair was the second sponsored by the Chinese Women's Association, which has been in existence only a few months. The first was a bazaar and fashion show given last fall at the Washington Club. The fashion show was so popular then that the one yesterday was given by request.

Miss Hazeltine Addresses D. C. Women Voters

Miss Helen Hazeltine, assistant in Institutional Care at the Children's Bureau, yesterday addressed the Department of Government and Child Welfare of the District of Columbia Voteless League of Women Votrs of its luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Miss Hazeltine, who has just returned from a study of institutions in Alabama, discussed "Modern Trends in Detention," a subject in which the league has been taking a keen interest.

She cited Cleveland as an example of good practice in detention. There, she explained, dependent children are detained in separate quarters from those held for delinquency. Institutions, she stated, are the only satisfactory means of handling delinquents. They cannot be properly looked after in boarding homes. The only cities where boarding homes have been even partly successful are those in which the system has been built up over a long period, she said, with an adequate number of skilled case workers.

This statement was of particular interest to members of the league, as they opposed a plan suggested by Representative Ross Collins, of Mississippi, last year, for abandoning the receiving home and placing delinquent as well as dependent children in boarding homes.

Miss Hazeltine was introduced by Mrs. Gordon Wagenet, chairman of the Department of Child Welfare

Ohio Petitions Seek Removal Of Gov. Davey

Committee's Report Will State Senate Claims Wide Corruption.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 28.—With the Ohio State Senate voting today to extend its session so an investigation of the State government could continue, announcement was made that petitions were being circulated asking removal of Gov. Martin L. Davey.

At the same time Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of the Cleveland Catholic Diocese, in a letter to 14 northern Ohio legislators said he opposed impeachment of the governor, because it "would increase political bitterness."

L. Leon Shepherd, a private investigator, of Lakewood, announced he was circulating the petitions demanding the Governor's removal on grounds of nonfeasance, misfeasance and malfeasance.

Report Claims Waste.

Bishops Schrembs wrote:

"I feel convinced that much confusion has resulted from political bias and personal vindictiveness during the last few months."

A preliminary investigating committee report, received by the Senate late in the day, alleged wholesale waste and corruption in State departments.

In a radio address tonight, Gov. Davey said the investigating committee was seeking to destroy him politically by "contemptible insinuation and by the introduction of base falsehoods."

Davey Assails "Falsehood."

"A member of the committee, at the very beginning, made the statement that if I would announce that I would not be a candidate for re-election, the investigation would be stopped immediately . . ." Davey said.

"At the end of two and a half months, nothing has been produced that reflects upon any responsible official of the State government, except the slanderous falsehoods of Lee Bradley, who is now awaiting trial on a charge of perjury."

Gov. Davey devoted most of his address to a discussion of testimony by Bradley who asserted he bargained with automobile concerns to give them large shares of the State's automobile purchases in exchange for contributions to Davey's 1934 campaign fund.

Mrs. I. D. Johnson Rites Are Today

A native of Baltimore, Mrs. Johnson was formerly Miss Isabella Wilson. Her husband was the late Frederick T. F. Johnson, Washington lawyer.

Mrs. Johnson was active in patriotic work here and for the past 14 years had been treasurer of the Mary Washington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. She was also a member of the American Association of University Women, the Washington Club, the Woman's City Club and the Washington branch of the Wilson College Club, of which she was the first president. She was a graduate of Wilson College.

Surviving is a sister, Miss Catherine E. Wilson, Elkton, Md.

Dr. G. S. Saffold Burial Is Today

Funeral services for Dr. Guy Stark Saffold, who died Sunday at his home, 9127 Thornhill road, Silver Spring, Md., will be held today at 11 a. m. at the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

In the World War Dr. Saffold, as captain in the Army Medical Corps, served overseas with Evacuation Hospital No. 13, from August, 1918, until April, 1919.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lenore Reach Saffold; three children, Guy Stark Saffold, jr., Rosemary and Virginia Reach Saffold, of Silver Spring; a brother, Ray Phillips Saffold, El Paso, Tex., and a sister, Mrs. H. F. Somers, of Hongkong, China.

Mrs. Francis Littlefield Will Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Francis A. Littlefield, 80, who died Sunday of a heart ailment at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mattie L. Hunter, Bealsville, Md., will be held at 1 p. m. today at W. W. Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. The Rev. Cornelius S. Abbott, rector of Good Shepherd Episcopal Church, will officiate. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mrs. Littlefield was the widow of Lieut. Martin Littlefield. Besides her daughter, Mrs. Littlefield leaves a son, G. E. Littlefield.

93 Drunks Fined On 4th Birthday Of Repeal in D. C.

Police Court Judge John McMahon celebrated the fourth birthday of repeal here yesterday by trying 93 drunks who had celebrated over the week-end. He fined them an average of $35 apiece. Two women were given their choice of paying $100 or serving 60 days in jail.

Police Court records show a decline in drunkenness since the District legalized liquor March 1, 1934. In 1933, the last full prohibition year, 16,867 persons were arrested.

The five-year high was reached in the first year of repeal, 1934, when 19,586 revelers were arrested. This figure dropped to 16,687 in 1935 and 13,872 in 1936.

Greenbelt Official Uses Ingenuity to Get Nine to Offices

Nine residents of the Government's model community at Greenbelt would have been late to work at nine Government offices yesterday morning but for the prompt action of Roy S. Braden, community manager.

Arriving at the Greenbelt bus stop, Braden discovered the only bus available was crowded to capacity. Nine Government workers were unable to find even standing room and would have been left until the next bus arrived, too late to get them to work on time.

He hunted up a station wagon owned by the Farm Security Administration, daddy of the Greenbelt project, loaded the nine aboard and deposited them at their offices in ample time for work.

Mass Is Thursday For J. B. Burch

Requiem mass for James B. Burch, 49, who died Sunday in Miami, will be celebrated Thursday at 9 a. m. in Holy Comforter Catholic Church, Fourteenth and East Capitol streets. The Rev. Edward Nester will officiate.

Mr. Burch, who went to Florida a week ago, had been ailing about a year. A native of Charles County (Md.), Mr. Burch was employed for 30 years with a railroad, and had been an engineer since 1917. He operated both passenger and freight trains between Washington and New York. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. He was also a member of the Knights of St. John.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary L. Burch; two sons, Francis E. and James B. Burch, jr.; three daughters, Mrs. Anita Day, Miss Gertrude L. Burch and Miss Christine Burch, all of this city; a brother, F. A. Burch, and a sister, Mrs. F. A. Martin, Charles County.

Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

William Brawner Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for William Ward Brawner, 70, a lifelong resident of Washington, who died Sunday at his home, 3600 Thirteenth street northeast, will be held at 9:30 a. m. today at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, Brookland.

Mr. Brawner was the son of the late William H. Brawner and the late Mrs. Emily Bernadine Orme Brawner. His parents were members of old Washington families.

Surviving are four sisters, Mrs. E. B. Woodward and the Misses Eleanor and Francis Brawner, all of this city, and Mrs. C. K. Hetfield, San Diego, Calif. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Committee Votes 10-to-2 Sanction of Jackson for Job

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved yesterday the nomination of Robert H. Jackson to be Solicitor General.

President Roosevelt nominated Jackson, an Assistant Attorney General, to succeed Stanley Reed, recently appointed to the Supreme Court.

The Judiciary Committee voted 10 to 2 in favor of Jackson's nomination, with Senators Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and King (Democrat), of Utah, voting in opposition.

Jackson's nomination probably will go before the Senate for final action today.

Bill Asks Suitland Airport for District

An airport for the District at Suitland in Prince Georges County, Md., was proposed yesterday by Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, in a measure which was referred to the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The bill would set up a National Capital airport commission including the Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of Aeronautics and the director of National Parks for the District.

An appropriation of $3,000,000 would be authorized.

Pine Requests Woman Aide as U. S. Attorney

recanted and said merely that women made him "nervous."

Last night spokesmen for women's groups received the news of a change of policy on women in the district attorney's office with warmest approval.

"I hope it's true," said former Judge Annabel Matthews, president of the Women's Bar Association. "I know Mr. Pine feels friendly toward women lawyers and will name one. There are any number of women practicing law in Washington who would be a credit to the office and to women."

Judge Bentley Pleased.

Mrs. Greathouse, who resumed private practice after leaving the district attorney's office, declared:

"There ought to be women in that office because there are so many cases a woman can handle particularly well—nonsupport cases, for instance. Women complainants would rather tell their stories to a woman. And there is no reason why a woman cannot do the regular work as well as a man if she likes that sort of thing. I never enjoyed prosecuting the public. There are plenty of women who could do a good job."

Judge Fay Bentley of Juvenile Court said she felt being a "man or woman doesn't matter when there's a job to be done." She added:

"I am sure the women lawyers in the city will be very grateful for what Mr. Pine has done. It should be very helpful."

Miss McCloskey Hinted.

Beatrice Clephane, director of the Legal Aid Bureau and former president of the women's bar, said she "would be delighted to see a woman appointed assistant district attorney and I would be delighted to see the right woman appointed. I feel there is a definite place for women in the district attorney's office and that women are equipped to do almost anything."

Miss Catherine McCloskey, a practicing Washington attorney, was most prominently mentioned in women's legal circles as likely to receive the appointment. Other "eligibles" are Miss Grace Kanode, secretary to Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat; Mrs. Lucy Kelly, who has been assigned from the Interstate Commerce Committee to Senator Wheeler's railroad investigation committee, and Dorothy Ashby Moncure, Mrs. Mabel Benson Sackis and Suzanna Wood, also engaged in private practice here.

Mrs. Una M. Baird, Newsman's Wife, to Be Buried Today

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. today at Gawler's Funeral Chapel, 1750 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, for Mrs. Una Morris Baird, who died Sunday at Towson, Md. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Baird, who was 31, was the wife of Joseph H. Baird, Washington and foreign newspaper correspondent. She was born in Idabell, Okla., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Claude Morris, who survive her. She came to Washington with her husband in 1926. Immediately after American recognition of Soviet Russia, Mr. and Mrs. Baird went to Moscow, where he was correspondent for the United Press. Mrs. Baird became ill in Moscow and never recovered her health. They returned to Washington in 1936.

In addition to her parents and husband, she is survived by a son, Philip Morris Baird, and five sisters, Mrs. Richard L. Turner, of Washington; Mrs. Earle A. Davis, of Wewoka, Okla.; Mrs. Amos K. Bass, Miss Thelma Morris and Miss Mary Elizabeth Morris, all of Durant, Okla.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Music Committee of the Junior Board of Commerce and the Community Center Department present Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra in the third "Children's Concert for Adults" in Roosevelt High School.

Suggested by the music committee of the Junior Board of Commerce as an experiment in that field vaguely known as music appreciation, the series of three "Children's Concerts for Adults" came to an end last night in Roosevelt High School with satisfaction to all concerned. The attendance has proved that such a brief course in the fundamentals of symphonic music was the supply for a demand, although the demand had remained unformulated. And, if one is to judge by the state of mind of the audience, it would not be surprising if very definite requests will be heard for a similar series next season.

Hans Kindler devoted his final talk to the matter of form in music, taking up in turn the toccata, the overture or sinfonia, the canon, the rondo, and sonata form as the basis for the classical symphony. One has felt during the weekly meetings a growing rapport between the audience and the conductor, and last evening there was a decided atmosphere of good-will. One surmises that Dr. Kindler's geniality and humor have revealed him in a new light to those who have watched him only as a conductor and that a new and personal relation has been established.

The illustrations for the material discussed were a toccata by Frescobaldi, the first movement of Mozart's early symphony in A major, the finale from Beethoven's seventh symphony, Jaernefelt's "Praeludium," Mosselov's "Iron Foundry" and the prelude to "Die Meistersinger."

Willkie Warns Business Against U. S. 'Invasion'

Detroit, Feb. 28 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern, assailed Government practices toward business men today and warned private industry to resist Federal "invasion."

Willkie, one of the business leaders who recently consulted with President Roosevelt, told the economic club that the Tennessee Valley authority represented a Government "threat" to private trade

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

After cross-examining Robert Jackson before his confirmation as Solicitor General, Senator Austin, of Vermont, rose to literary heights of scorn.

"That man is a veritable Javert," he told a group of acquaintances, after the hearing ended.

* * * *

Javert is the police officer in Victor Hugo's novel, "Les Miserables," who dogs the footsteps of the noble convict, Jean Valjean. Famed as a ruthless, relentless prosecutor, yet Javert is described in Webster's as "the incarnation of devotion to duty."

Remind me to ask Senator Austin who is Bob Jackson's Jean Valjean.

Since the news got out that the Navy is ready to spend $85,000,000 on battleships that used to cost $35,000,000, the inventors are hard at work to devise a warship that can't be sunk by a $100,000 airplane. One chap arrived with a model of a fearful vessel resembling both a porcupine and a snail.

"Warships like tortoises."

Such ships may be almost invulnerable defensively, but offensively they are handicapped; the war might be over before they arrived . . . As a matter of fact, the Navy thinks it had a battleship which is well-nigh unsinkable: hence the $85,000,000 price. The discovery that a bomb landing 150 feet away might cripple a "dreadnaught" will have the admirals scratching their heads . . . Maybe the President will disclose the results of the bomb vs. battleship tests today; the Navy says it's up to him.

PAJAMA PORTRAITS.
SIR WILLMOTT LEWIS.

A singular position in Washington is Sir Willmott's. British Ambassadors come and go, but Sir Willmott, the London Times' correspondent, and related by marriage to the Associated Press, is a perpetual ambassador, the Capital's most sought after-dinner speaker. His amiably mephistophelean face at the head table guarantees the success of any banquet. Listeners learn to relish his pet words—singularly, inferential, melodramatic, phenomenon. His precise, clipped enunciation makes Western Senators self-conscious, and his long, pendant sentences explode over the coffee like beef pudding full of meat, with delayed fuses. His sly, camouflaged, tactful razzing of American foibles is highly palatable; he is a Will Rogers with an Oxford accent.

In some eminent Washington gatherings it seems almost indecent to be under 50 years old . . . The younger men, surrounded by pink-faced, white-haired elder statesmen, feel naked and immature, like diapered infants.

And the younger men seem more worried about tides and portents; their weathered elders have reached equilibrium . . . Maybe the oldsters aren't worried enough.

"—infant among the sages."

Westbrook Pegler, the boxing connoisseur turned pundit, stopped off in Chicago the other day to drop in at President Robert Hutchins' class in metaphysics at the University of Chicago.

They were deep in the theological opinions of St. Thomas Aquinas that day, and Peg confided to a sweet, earnest coed afterward that he fell off the sled going around the first turn.

YOUNG BOB.

O daddy, see that little boy,
A-sitting with those sages?
To be like him would be a joy—
Is he one of the pages?
Why, that's Wisconsin's pride, my lad;
A hustler in his job;
For "Fighting Robert" was his dad;
That's Philip's brother Bob.

It's worth a trip to the Hill to see William Shearer, "the man who wrecked the Geneva Naval conference," sitting in at the big Navy hearings, impassive and as inscrutable as two or three admirals, with a bit of a decoration in his lapel . . . He seems ready to pull a 16-inch gun out of his vest pocket at a moment's notice.

Shearer is one of the Capital's mystery men, though he describes himself as simply a lover of ships. . . . If the Navy builds bigger dreadnaughts, Ship Lover Shearer will paint them, in his marine-blue apartment on Sixteenth street.

Some of the younger Navy men wish he loved to paint airplanes.

Two Escape With Minor Hurts When Car Overturns

Two persons were riding in this car when it collided and overturned on the sidewalk and lawn at Twentieth and G streets northwest late last night. One man was injured slightly, requiring only first-aid treatment, though passengers in the other car and witnesses had to lift the overturned machine to free the pair. The injured man, Lloyd Armstrong, 22, of 434 F street southwest, was released after treatment at Emergency Hospital.

Agencies Tell Need of More Relief Money

D.C. Heads Urged to Ask That $900,000 Be Increased.

Inadequacy of the present $900,000 relief appropriation and the need for an impartial investigation of relief administration and needs were discussed before the District Commissioners yesterday by civic delegations and by the Board of Public Welfare.

The Welfare Board, headed by Director Elwood Street, urged "an extensive investigation of both relief administration and needs" and deplored "inadequacy of the $900,000 appropriation." The board said $3,250,000 was needed to meet the relief bill in the District.

Representatives of the Board of Trade and the Washington Taxpayers League also attended. Both groups have opposed an increase in appropriations. Surveys by them indicated that the District is adequately caring for its relief applicants.

Expense Fund Sought.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced that District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan would urge Senator Elmer Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, to ask for "a liberal appropriation" for the relief investigation.

Members of the Welfare Board present included Mrs. Louise King, Edgar Morris, John R. Pinkett, Dr. H. J. Crosson, Dr. Frederick W. Perkins and Mrs. Spencer Gordon. Also present were W. C. Meade, disbursing officer at the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare; Disbursing Officer James P. Lusby; Otto J. Cass, deputy WPA administrator; District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan; Assistant District Auditor A. R. Pilkerton; Paul Kirby, assistant director of Public Welfare, and C. B. Whaley, special auditor for relief administration.

Earlier yesterday representatives of the citizens' committee on unemployment and relief, headed by Chairman George J. Cleary, presented resolutions to Commissioner Hazen urging the need for an impartial study and an increased appropriation for relief needs.

Relief Only $300,000.

Chairman Cleary, of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, stated after the meeting that "we had an amicable meeting with Commissioner Hazen, and he told us that he is heartily in favor of the proposed investigation."

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, board member of the Council of Social Agencies, present at the earlier hearing, read a statement, indorsed by the citizens' committee on unemployment, pointing out the inadequacy of the present appropriation of $900,000.

"The House committee has assigned $900,000 for relief in 1938," Mrs. Meyer stated, "of which $600,000 are fixed charges for the and D. C. Dow, representing the Central Labor Union.
aid of dependent children. That leaves $300,000 for the entire relief situation.

"Last year the Department of Public Welfare found $1,300,000 inadequate, not only for straight relief but also for the help of the unemployed. We know at present that there are about 1,200 relief cases that are not receiving adequate attention and that there are, at the minimum, some 5,000 o 6,000 unemployed who are on the borderline of destitution.

Relief Cheapest Policy.

"Senator Thomas stated that he was willing to vote to rebuild a bridge because he could not accept the responsibility if the old bridge collapsed, but he seems perfectly willing to accept full responsibility for the slow starvation of thousands of people. Those two contradictory attitudes seem hard to reconcile.

"Considered merely from an economic standpoint and with all considerations for humanity and justice ignored, it is cheaper to keep our population in a reasonable condition of health and sanity, than to attempt to patch them up in hospitals and other institutions after they have been allowed to degenerate physically and mentally.

"If the House and Senate Committee cannot be moved by humanitarian reasons, the logical argument of economy should have some influence upon them.

"Futile bickering between the City of Washington and the Congressional committees concerning the situation reveals with startling clarity the absurdities of the Government under which we live in Washington. The whole situation is grotesque, and if it results in nothing else, it should instill in the minds of every Washingtonian an iron determination to achieve representation in Congress as soon as possible."

Prelate Gives Views.

Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, of the Washington Cathedral, also present at the hearing, made the following statement:

"We had an emergency meeting with Commissioner Hazen on the relief situation and as a result feel confident that the Commissioners will co-operate heartily in the proposed investigation by Congress of the local relief situation.

"In the absence of any representation of the District on Congress, we are dependent on the Commissioners to present our needs, and the Commissioners are handicapped under the budget and accounting act from supporting recommendations not approved by the Budget Bureau.

"The $900,000 approved by the Budget Bureau for general relief is woefully and totally inadequate to meet the needs of the local unemployed. There were about 27,000 of these, in addition to those on WPA jobs, according to the last unemployment census of last November, and last week's active list of the local branch of the U. S. Unemployment Service."

U. S. Defense Drive Urged By McAdoo

Senator Cites Present World Tension In Address to V. F. W.

Senator William G. McAdoo (Democrat), of California, urged an adequate national defense program last night as the Veterans of Foreign Wars held their seventh annual coast-to-coast radio rally.

Speaking from the National Press Club ballroom, where the local members of the V. F. W. met at a banquet in honor of their national commander, Scott P. Squyres, McAdoo declared that "we have the basic foundations of a strength and power which will make our Nation unconquerable if we heed the warnings of the times and prepare to meet any emergencies which may confront us."

U. S. Not Immune to Attack.

Pointing out that many tend to believe that because of our geographical position the United States is immune to attack and that the United States does not need to be prepared for war, McAdoo asserted "no greater blunder could be made by those invested with responsibility for the safety of our country than to act upon this theory."

He said that the chief reason for the United States entering the World War was the belief among other countries that America was unprepared and declared that if the United States in 1917 had had a navy "strong enough to take command of the seas, we would never have been involved in the World War."

Citing the recent South American trip of the "flying fortresses," McAdoo observed that "one cannot longer entertain a doubt that it is time for America to wake up and protect herself in a world which is undergoing extraordinary and unpredictable changes." "Let us never again leave this Nation in a defenseless position," he urged.

Urges Preparedness.

Squyres, declared that "every man who has served his country in time of war deserves a job that will enable him to provide for himself and his family, against future insecurity."

"If Government and industry are unable to find employment for these men," he said, "we believe they are still entitled to decent shelter and three square meals a day, even if the cost must be met by Government pensions.

"Here in America, we take pride in the fact that no human beings are permitted to suffer from hunger and want. The men who have served their country with honor in time of war are certainly entitled to at least the same measure of consideration the average unfortunate person is receiving at the hands of society today."

Squyres said that the best way to keep the United States out fo war "is to be prepared against war, with a national defense program that will discourage the attacks of any single nation, or any combination of nations."

Petition Circulated.

He announced that in an attempt to do something about peace, the V. F. W. is circulating a petition to be signed by citizens who "believe this country should keep out of war by being prepared against war."

At the conclsion of his speech, while a bugler sounded "Attention," Squyres administered the oath of membership to recruits scattered about the country.

Mrs. Laurie Schertle, national president of the V. F. W. Ladies' Auxiliary, told of the work being done to provide work for widows and children of veterans. Mentioning a proposed Congressional bill to provide compensation for World War widows and orphans, she said:

"We believe this proposal is a just one, because we believe this Government must acknowledge responsibility for the widows and orphans of the men who have worn its uniform in time of war."

Trinidad Backs Making Relief Fraud a Crime

Citizens Also Indorse Move for Inquiry Into Aid Requests in D. C.

Proposed legislation to make acceptance of Federal relief under false pretenses a crime was approved last night by the Trinidad Citizens Association meeting at the Wheatley School, Montello avenue and Neal streets northeast. The association also indorsed investigation of the numbers of employables and unemployables requesting relief in the District as proposed by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

A resolution urging a change in District police regulations to prohibit keeping domestic fowls and pigeons in densely populated districts was adopted as was another opposing extension of the use of one-man streetcars. The association suggested that Seventeenth street northeast from Bladensburg road to Benning road be made a through street.

Deanwood Citizens

The Deanwood Citizens Association, meeting at Deanwood School, adopted resolutions asking addition of more policemen to the Metropolitan force and opposing unification of public recreation agencies under a recreation board. The association approved a letter to Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, asking improvement of streets, sidewalks and sewers. It was decided to hold a card tournament at a date to be fixed later for benefit of the Community Chest.

Mid City Citizens

The Mid-City Citizens Association adopted a resolution favoring a proposed 1 cent tax on beer and indorsed a proposal of H. C. Whitehurst for the District to construct an underpass at Thomas Circle. Whitehurst explained the objectives in an underpass proposed for Dupont Circle.

The association commended broadcasts of cases in Traffic Court and urged that police regulations now enforced against horn blowing by automobiles between 11 p. m. and 7 a. m. be extended to 24 hours. The association particularly condemned drivers of Capital Transit Co. buses as offenders.

Trade Unit Scores Anacostia River Industrial Moves

Efforts of "out of State businessmen" to industrialize the area along the Anacostia River and to have an 8-foot channel dredge to Bladensburg were condemned last night by the Chamber of Commerce of Prince Georges County, Md., meeting at College Park. The chamber unanimously indorsed a recommendation of Fred W. Gast, chairman of the flood control commission, against the county taking any action jeopardizing benefits from the conversion of lands along the river to the national park system.

Gast said Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland appeared at a hearing before the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and reversed his previous stand advocating dredging the channel. He said Senator Tydings suggested the commission take immediate steps to set aside as park lands all areas along the Anacostia River and its tributaries marked out in the master park plan of 1931.

B. S. Steinberg, of the college of engineering of the University of Maryland, spoke on highway safety. Motion pictures on the same subject were shown under auspices of the Maryland Motor Vehicle Commission.

District Spectator Sues Ball Club for $10,000

Because of injuries he claims he suffered when either a wire or a nail pierced his hand while he was attending the All-Star baseball game at Griffith Stadium last July, Sylvan B. Blechman, department store owner, yesterday in District Court filed suit against the Washington American League Baseball Club for $10,000 damages.

Bogus Money Gang Believed Broken in D.C.

Four Men Seized Here After Counterfeit Bills Are Passed.

A gang which has been passing counterfeit money in Baltimore and Washington was believed by United States Treasury agents to be broken up last night with the arrest of four Baltimore men here. Three of the men were captured in an automobile, the fourth when he was alleged to have attempted to pass a bogus $10 bill in a liquor store at 320 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Three men giving their names as Frank Palmisano, 21; Anthony Morino, 29, and Anthony Piccirilli, 20, were arrested at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast. They had been pursued there by Radio Patrolman O. J. See and J. G. Beach.

Anthony Vacca, 24, also of Baltimore, was arrested in the liquor store. The proprietor, Chris Lombardi, said he attempted to pass a $10 bill.

About a half hour earlier Nathan Chatlin told police a man passed a $10 note at his liquor store at 503 Eighth street northeast. Later at the Fifth Precinct Chatlin identified Vacca, police said.

Richard Magenty, proprietor of a liquor store in the 1600 block of Rhode Island avenue, identified one of the men as the passer of another bogus note, police said.

Institute on Roses For Garden Clubs To Open Tonight

Members of twenty-one Washington, Maryland and Virginia garden clubs will attend the three-day Institute of Rose Growing which opens tonight at George Washington University under the auspices of the Potomac Rose Society and the university.

Rose growing in this area will be discussed by scientists from the Department of Agriculture, nursery specialists and university botanists.

At tonight's session, starting at 8 p. m., Mrs. Whitman Cross, president of the Potomac Rose Society, and Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of the university, will greet members of the institute. Mrs. E. H. Klaber, Mayor R. L. Ruffner of Alexandria, vice president of the Potomac Rose Society; A. H. Hanson, Robert Pyle and J. W. Staalman will speak.

Earl Godwin to Head White House Newsmen

Members of the White House Correspondents Association yesterday elected Earl Godwin, of the Washington Times, president of the organization to succeed Walter Trohan, of the Chicago Tribune.

Other officers elected by the organization were John C. O'Brien, of the New York Herald-Tribune, vice president; Robert E. Henderson, Central News of America, secretary-treasurer, and the following members of the executive committee: D. Harold Oliver, of the Associated Press; William C. Murphy, of the Philadelphia Inquirer, and Claude A. Mahoney, of the Wall Street Journal.

Added Relief Vs. Less Taxes Is Debate Topic

C.I.O. Aide, Social Workers, Audience Assail Claim Funds Are Adequate.

Washington's problem of more relief vs. less taxation produced vehement, if well-ordered, debate last night at the Monday Evening Club, where Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, was lone defender of "the interests of the taxpayer," while the cause of relief was upheld by social service workers, a C. I. O. representative and the audience.

The figures Lusk produced allegedly proving that "the amount of relief given today is adequate" were directly assailed by Sidney B. Katz, secretary of the C. I. O. Industrial Union Council of the District of Columbia, as Dr. Frederick W. Perkins, of the District Board of Public Welfare, and other speakers insisted that the proposed $900,000 appropriation for Washington's relief needs is hopelessly insufficient.

Seriousness of the District's situation was so uniformly emphasized by Katz, Perkins, Miss Katharine Lenroot, of the Children's Bureau; Maj. Gilbert S. Decker, of the Salvation Army; Morris Klass, of the Jewish Social Service Agency, and representatives of the Workers' Alliance and other organizations, that Edgar M. Gerlach, vice president of the club, chided the audience for talking "at Mr. Lusk and not with him."

D. C. Most Prosperous.

Charging that some relief recipients are being "pampered," Lusk attacked "the idea which has grown up among certain classes of people that the Government owes them a living." He held that "Washington is the most prosperous city in the United States" and yet, if the proposed increase in relief appropriations from the present $900,000 to the suggested $3,247,000 is effected, "our expenditures for relief would be 23 per cent per capita more than Baltimore."

Katz maintained that, according to Lusk's own figures, 3 per cent of the population of the District is receiving public assistance, while the average for the United States is 10 per cent. He charged that the House of Representatives approved the $900,000 relief figure after the true attitude of the District had been misrepresented.

"On the most conservative estimate," Dr. Perkins said, "there are in the city at least 3,000 employable but unemployed persons who need relief." The WPA is functioning "splendidly," he said, "but it cannot automatically provide employment on the spot for every person who needs it."

House Bill "Wasteful."

Dr. Perkins stated that "nothing could be more wasteful" than the House bill's provision that only 7½ per cent of the appropriation can be expended on personnel. "At least 10 per cent is needed," he said.

Mrs. Heslip, co-chairman of a committee that investigated 500 sample rejected relief applicants, concluded that "this group is convinced that the need for relief and assistance is very great."

"Destitution is a social disease, and we can't afford to neglect it any more than syphilis or tuberculosis," Miss Lenroot declared, while Ray Everett, of the Social Hygiene Society, foresaw that uncared-for relief applicants might soon find refuge in jail, St. Elizabeth's or tuberculosis sanitaria.

National Symphony Fund Drive Half-Way to Goal of $103,000

The half-way mark of the National Symphony Orchestra's $103,000 campaign was passed during the week-end when the total was carried to $53,952.32, L. Corrin Strong, general chairman of the drive, announced yesterday.

Guarantee of a symphony orchestra in Washington next year was brought appreciably nearer by the $7,564.57 pledge Saturday and Sunday. The sum now promised represents 54.32 per cent of the goal, which must be reached by March 15. If the campaign fails, the National Symphony Orchestra Association will not make plans for the orchestra's 1938-39 season, it was said.

At yesterday's report meeting of the campaign committee in the Carlton, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, vice-chairman, pleaded for more small gifts, declaring that "it is the gift for small amounts, contributed by several thousand people who sincerely love music and are willing to make sacrifices for it, that make the National symphony possible." The $53,000 now pledged is made up of 441 gifts.

Persons who are not reached by the 800 volunteer workers may contribute by mailing or bringing donations to the Carlton Hotel headquarters, Mrs. Howe said.

Father Riordon, Fifty Years A Priest, Is Honored by 800

Members of St. Martin's Church Hold Card Party to Raise Funds for New Building on Pastor's 'Golden Jubilee.'

The Rev. Michael J. Riordon, 77-year-old pastor of St. Martin's Church, was honored last night by members of his parish in ceremonies at the Mayflower Hotel.

More than 800 past and present members of the church observed the fiftieth year of Father Riordon's career as a priest, with a card party and dance to raise funds for the new St. Martin's Church.

Father Riordon, who visited the party for a brief period, congratulated the parish members for their co-operation in both "spiritual and temporal affairs."

He told of his life as a priest, recalling that in the first year of his religious studies he was offered an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point. He would have been a classmate of Gen. John J. Pershing.

Instead of accepting the appointment, he continued his studies here and abroad. He was ordained by Pope Leo XIII.

Father Riordon has been pastor of St. Martin's for the past 15 years, following 9 years at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and earlier service at churches in Maryland.

Father Riordon was introduced by Miss M. Catherine Dorsch, general chairman, who expressed the "affectionate devotion of the parish to its beloved pastor in the year of his golden jubilee in the priesthood."

Fairness to All Sides Stressed By Miss Perkins

Industrial Peace Must Be Tempered With Justice, She Declares.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins in a radio speech last night repeated her declaration that "there must be industrial peace but with justice."

A major portion of Miss Perkins' talk dealt with the history of the Department of Labor, which on March 4 will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of its establishment. She emphasized the shift during its existence "from a national economy based on agriculture to one conditioned largely by industry."

Miss Perkins then said:

"Fairness to every interest in a democracy is of paramount importance; fairness between wage earner and employer, between employer and employer, between earner and earner. Opportunity, a chance to develop, a chance to grow, a chance to bring up a family under better conditions—these are the desires of the millions of workers in our country.

"In concrete form these desires are expressed as: (1) shorter hours; (2) adequate annual income; (3) safe and healthful working and living conditions, (4) social security; (5) recognition of wage earners as an integral and significant part of the common life with an opportunity to contribute to and play a part in furthering the social and economic welfare."

Versatile Thieves Get Woman's Wig And 10,000 Cigars

As evidence of the divergence of need—or taste—among thieves in Washington, police last night reported as stolen:

One woman's wig, red.

Ten thousand cigars.

The cigars were stolen from the Farran Transfer Co., 208 D street southeast; the wig from a second-floor beauty shop at 1206 G street northwest.

The wig is worth $35.

Babcock Raps 1-Man Rule of Civil Service

E. Claude Babcock, president of the United Civil Service Employes, said last night that placing the civil service under administration of one man would halt progress in Government. He spoke in a forum of the Women's Democratic National Council.

Babcock attacked the measure, contained in the Government reorganization pending in Congress, as a return to the same type of patronage the Continental Army fought—by which the King of England gave control of the colonies to his friends.

"This isn't today's problem," he declared. "It was talked over when the Constitution was written. We're going to talk it over, and our sons and grandsons will talk it over."

Babcock's attack supported criticisms of the plan by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia. Ramspeck said that legislative and quasi-judicial functions of the Civil Service Commission should not be placed in the hands of one man.

He said that if the advisory board of seven persons, provided in the plan, were given necessary power, it would mean simply that the present commission would be enlarged by four members.

Paul David, who served on the advisory committee or reorganization, said if the measure were passed, "the improvement in Government personnel during the next five years would make the preceding 50 years look like nothing."

David said that "both in and out of the civil service there has been complete dissatisfaction with the present commission" for delay in meeting personnel requirements and "lack of imagination" in personnel problems.

"This is not a political issue. It is a question of the best form of administrative machinery to carry out a particular job."

'I Am My Youth' Is Provocative Play of Literati

Premiere of New Drama Elicits 8 First-Night Curtain Calls.

By Nelson B. Bell

"I AM MY YOUTH." Alfred de Liagre, jr., presents a new play in three acts and six scenes by Ernest Pascal and Edwin Blum. Staged by Mr. de Liagre; settings and costumes by Donald Oenslager. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Benjamin Place ..... Gordon Richards
William Godwin ..... Charles Waldron
Mary Jane Godwin ..... Viola Roache
Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin ..... Sylvia Weld
Claire Godwin ..... Jean Bellows
Fanny Wollstonecraft Godwin ..... Linda Watkins
Percy Bysshe Shelley ..... Frank Lawton
Harriet ..... Arden Young
Boggs ..... Robert Vivian

There is more than a sketchy outline of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" in the pattern of "I Am My Youth," the new play by Ernest Pascal and Edwin Blum, revealed by Alfred de Liagre, jr., for the first time on any stage in the National Theater last night.

The analogy is suggested, perhaps, by the fact that Charles Waldron, the admirable actor who played the elder Barrett in the Katharine Cornell vehicle, also is the pivotal figure in the new drama evolved by the Messrs. Pascal and Blum from the lives of another coterie of literary people who lived their emotionally emblazoned lives many years ago. But the similarity goes even further than that. In the new work are to be discerned the same disregard of social conventions, the same pathological idiosyncrasy that made the senior Barrett a parent of unique inclinations and the identical motivations that imbue "I Am My Youth" with much the same flavor the Rudolf Besier play possessed.

The scene of the action is laid continuously and uninterruptedly in the drawing room of William Godwin's home in Skinner street, London, in 1815. It is enriched by all of the physical embellishments that might be expected to adorn the home of a prominent publisher of more than a century ago, who accepts into his home the poet Shelley, beginning to show promise as a man of letters.

An Harassed Household.

All has not been going well with the Godwins. They are harassed by debt. They also are harassed by a peculiarly independent family of daughters. Likewise they are pursued by the bizarre precepts that have been written into his major book by William Godwin. From all of these circumstances, the authors have evolved a play that didn't quite move with the briskness requisite to its fulfillment last evening, but which, nevertheless, gave evidence of a sufficiently sound basic intent and a sufficiently rounded first attempt to approximate its fundamental worth as an intimate study of an interesting and completely independent family of social adventurers.

There are implications in the fabric of the drama that are not pleasant. The same was true of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street"—the strangely abnormal family relationships that cause a lifting of the eyebrows at the impulses of an unnatural father and the complete indifference of many characters of primary importance to the usual observances of those comprising an ostensibly respectable and respected family of prominence. The poet Shelley will not gain in public esteem by the frank etching of his character placed upon the canvas drawn by this provocative play. He abandons his wife for an unwedded love, a sister-in-law participates in a similarly unchaste romance and Mrs. Godwin finally forsakes her fireside for jealous reasons that cast a bit of a stigma upon the play's moral and ethical foundation, which, whether based upon fact or fiction, still is a shade on the side of daring and sinister suggestion.

"I Am My Youth" is a trifle cumbered with verbiage. Well-written and literate in dialogue, it nevertheless bogs down occasionally from the sheer weight of its speech. I should say that the chief fault in last night's performance was an inability on the part of the cast engaged in a first performance to capture precisely the right tempo at which the six scenes comprising the three acts should be played. They were laughs where there should have been none and none where comedy was the obvious intent. That is a matter that will be remedied as the week wears on.

Is Ably Cast.

There are too many able players in the cast assembled by Mr. de Liagre to permit of the suspicion that any failure of performance will be permitted to mar the excellence of a serious biographical drama that has many fine points to commend it.

Charles Waldron, in the role of William Godwin, easily is the axis upon which the three acts revolve. He brings to a role that is not too sympathetic all of the fine qualities of impersonation that marked his characterization of the elder Barrett in the Katharine Cornell play to which reference already has been made. Then there are the consistently reliable Viola Roache, as his wife; Linda Watkins, as his presumable daughter; Frank Lawton, as Shelley, and Sylvia Weld and Jean Bellows, as his legitimate daughters, to lend additional luster to a finely chosen roster of principals.

The role of Shelley may not strike an immediately responsive chord in every breast, but there can be no quibbling over the skill with which the character is delineated by Frank Lawton. There can be no quibbling, as a matter of fact, over the manner in which any character in the play is portrayed. The only apparent fault, once granting the acceptability of the subject matter, lies in the timing of the action and the delivery of the speeches.

"I Am My Youth" is staged with the artistic discretion always to be expected of any offering for which Donald Oenslager has designed the settings and costumes. It is impeccable in its observance of period and mood.

Last evenings' generous audience manifested an enthusiastic approval of the piece by according it eight curtain calls at the conclusion of the final scene of the last act. Mr. Waldron, Miss Watkins and Mr. Lawton shared equally in this expression of mass approval of their work. The unseen authors of the play probably were in the back of the audience's mind, too. They deserved to be.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Connie Bennet, in "Merrily We Live", Belies Canard; Stars Are Not as Temperamental as They Are Painted

Personal Contacts With Ethel Barrymore, Katharine Hepburn, Katharine Cornell, Roland Young, Jimmy Cagney, and Scores More Dissipate Clouds of Rumor About "Temperament;" Theater Notes.

BELL.

YESTERDAY afternoon, while Rudolph Berger, Washington manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was unspooling "Merrily We Live" for an invited audience at the Ambassador Theater, the thought occurred to me that Constance Bennett, costarred with Brian Aherne in the film, probably is one of the most maligned young women in Hollywood.

The eldest of the three talented daughters of that distinguished star of the theater, Richard Bennett, has the reputation of being tempestuously temperamental. Only the more diplomatic of the producers and directors seem able to cope with her high-voltage nature. Almost any minute, the legend runs, "Connie" is apt to go into a de luxe tantrum and toss a lawsuit in your face. I somehow seem to doubt all this.

Times without number I have encountered these "temperamental" stars of the stage and screen—usually with a premonition of disaster—only to discover that they are not very much different from anybody else.

If you set your mind to it, there is no great problem involved in "getting the goat" of any unsuspecting victim, on the stage or off. "Picking a fight" is a tremendously simple matter—if anyone wants to pick a fight. A great many "interviewers" seem to want to; strangely conceive it to be their function to bait the object of their interrogations with questions known to be inimical to amity and a generally sympathetic understanding. That is no way to go about it.

As I say, I have encountered many of these "temperaments," man and boy, and have yet to acquire a scar to show for it.

Having enjoyed the privilege of acquaintanceship with her father and two sisters, Joan and Barbara (Mrs. Morton Downey), I am constrained to believe that all of the balderdash about Constance Bennett's uppity-uppityness is precisely a mess of balderdash.

They told me the same about Fifi D'Orsay, the first time she came to town. Here was a gal who might be expected to say or do anything—and probably would. She had disrobed to a one-piece bathing suit and taken herself a midday plunge in a mid-city fountain in one of Indianapolis' public squares—or is it a circle? Then she had dashed up and kissed a traffic cop on duty, much to that gentleman's discomfiture, and otherwise had identified herself as a young woman who stopped at nothing. Yet, when I met her, she was practically like any other high-strung young woman with talent. To be sure, when I left her dressing-room at the Earle Theater, I think she was skinning the cat on the transom, but outside of that everything was very Emily Post!

Then, too, I am able to recall the fear inspired in the hearts of all newspaper scribes by the brilliant Miss Ethel Barrymore. I rather shied away from her, at first. She was popularly supposed to abhor the press. She did—and does—no such thing. She merely abhors—as everyone has the right to do—those unthinking representatives of the Fourth Estate who happen not to know what time it is. I have some very pleasant notes and an autographed photograph or two to prove it.

• • • •

And I was told, once again, that the late Lilyan Tashman was not only dynamite of the most explosive and destructive sort, but poison as well, when confronted by a newspaperman who might ask questions out of turn. As a matter of fact, the first time the brittle and wholly fascinating Lil came to town I was warned away from her dressing room because she had burst into a white flame when asked to pose with some commercial gadget for advertising purposes and, at the moment, was deemed an unpromising prospect for any sort of coherent conversation. That, also, was a large consignment of the old malarky. When we started, Lilyan was still smoldering slightly, but the one about the two Irishmen put a quick end to that. I never met a more gracious or congenial person.

• • • •

And let's not forget Katharine Cornell. I was tipped off that she would stand for no flippancies and any conversation to which she might contribute would have to be held on a high level of factual and informative discussion. That also was so much pure bunk, as the elegant expression is. With a couple of toy Dachshunds slithering about her dressing room to lend it a touch of informal camaraderie, nothing in the world could have been easier or more pleasant than to strike up an immediate friendship with one of the most charming figures in the American theater—a star of the first flight, who enjoys a laugh and a bit of verbal sparring quite as well as the young woman who lives next door on any street in town.

• • • •

Perhaps of all the stars who have visited Washington within recent years it was Katharine Hepburn who came to town under the heaviest handicap of a false reputation for being antagonistic to the press. It may have been that because I was not among the boys and girls whom she deluded one afternoon by alighting from the wrong side of her train and scurrying across the tracks to comparative safety—at the instigation of Jed Harris, producer of "The Lake"—I approached Miss Hepburn with no chip showing on my shoulder. She seemed to me, backstage at the National, more like a high-school girl than the "temperamental" young actress I had heard so much about. The last time she was here, she sat around a hotel suite in slacks and a decorative jumper and "took her hair down" for the benefit of all and sundry who had notebooks and pencils along—as if veteran newspaper people carried such things as part of their portable equipment! If Katharine Hepburn is temperamental, I am Mount Vesuvius.

• • • •

In the case of Jimmy Cagney, it was a little different. Jimmy is a hard lad to involve in anything more than a monosyllabic conversation. The reason is that, for all of the aggressively tough characterizations he has brought to the screen, Jim is a shy and diffident fellow who finds airy persiflage a matter of some difficulty. Once you get to know the chap, the impression is inevitable that his roles have completely belied the actual character of the man. After all, he was a "hoofer" on the stage before he became a screen star.

• • • •

Roland Young is cut from the same piece. The veteran and humorously gifted star of more stage and screen hits than could be counted on all your fingers and toes, is, surprisingly enough, the most reticent of persons when away from the footlights or the Klieg. It isn't that he doesn't want to talk; merely that he is too bashful. I learned this from personal experience and a few words from Fredric March when he was here with his wife, Florence Eldridge, for the President's birthday celebrations. Remarking on the difficulty I had had in trying to draw Mr. Young out on a certain brief backstage broadcast, Mr. March confided that he could readily understand how it happened. Working from a script, Mr. Young, it seems, is entirely himself; confronted with the perplexity of a little ad libbing, he is struck practically dumb.

This thing could go on forever—more or less—back to the days of Jim Corbett, the first celebrity I ever interviewed, and down through so long a list that many of the names cannot even be recalled. But the point is that I still think Constance Bennett probably is one of the most maligned young women in Hollywood. I'd like to meet her sometime. And so, of course, would you.

Jackie Suffers Form Sore Toe

After deferring an anticipated minor operation for several weeks in hopes he could nish "White Banners" without interruption, Jackie Cooper has begun treatments which take him to a physician three times a week. The 15-year-old actor's trouble is a painful lump just under the joint of the left large toe.

"What did the doctor say was the trouble?" Jackie was asked.

"He said it was a corn," Jackie replied sheepishly.

Youngster's Face Intercepts Tomato

Jane Withers has a special place in her heart for Robert Wilcox.

The young actor who has the leading male role in Jane's next starrer, "Rascals," intercepted with his face a tomato intended for the starlet in a vegetable fight sequence of the picture.

The script named Jane as the victim, but property man, Mack Elliott, threw the tomato inaccurately and hit Wilcox. Director Bruce Humberstone like it so well he decided to save Jane's face wear and tear.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 28.—Hollywood's allowing another of its greatest assets to slip away. I'm referring to John McCormick, that beloved Irish tenor, who rose from the soil in the simplest surroundings to Olympic heights of fame, and found a permanent place in the hearts of his countrymen.

HEDDA HOPPER.

For the past year he's been among us writing his memoirs. He's one of our finest musicians. The phrasing and clearness of his enunciation are the envy of all singers. He's been invited to our parties but no one has offered him a job. And what a voice coach he'd make!

Last time he was here he received $50,000 a week for ten weeks doing a picture for Fox. Through that they discovered Maureen O'Sullivan, a schoolmate of John's daughter, Gwen.

The butcher, the baker, the candle-stick maker waited while $1,370,807 in bets poured into Santa Anita race track on Washington's birthday.

Would you take that ride just to look at the most beautiful setting a race track ever had? I predict that's what you'll be doing in a few years if the gambling fever here isn't curbed. One of the big stockholders of Santa Anita has sold more than half his holdings.

But you'd need new glands popped into you if you couldn't get a thrill from Stagehand's performance in winning the Santa Anita Derby. Frank Lloyd, the director, seeing my smile, said to me: "Funny thing, all you women were on him but we bet on another horse. I thought my wife was foolish when she said to me: 'Stage hands have always been good to me and you don't think I'm going to turn against them now.'"

I admired the sportsmanship of Mr. Parr, owner of Legal Light and Sun Egret, who quietly said: "Better luck next time." Mr. Parr was dressed—as he does for the English Derby—in a gray suit and gray bowler hat. To him Legal Light is more than a race horse. He used to hold him in his lap when he was a baby.

The Easter Parade on Fifth Avenue in New York is one of the events of the year. In Hollywood, we have one daily.

The bonnets got as much attention as the ponies at the race track. I'm happy to relate, most of them were becoming. One of the pretties was a dark blue scooped straw—like a sun bonnet, with a light blue band around the crown and the ends hanging down the back.

Another was a flat straw sailor with a half-inch turn-up at the edge, and a voluminous white veil with black dotes tied into a bow on top, held in place by two huge pearl hatpins. All she needed was a pair of bloomers and a bicycle built for two.

Another black straw sailor was done in miniature. The crown was no bigger than a lace dolly under a finger bowl. It perched on the top of the head and was held on by a black veil tied with a baby bow under the chin.

Some of the flower hats looked as though the girls had taken a trowel along and gone to work in the garden and lifted them right onto their heads.

I saw several frilly shirtwaists and skirts. Lots of print dresses and thin tailor-made suits. I noticed the skirts are made with a great many flat pleats, which gives a dancing look as you walk.

And those bundled up to their necks in fur coats gave themselves a free Turkish bath. I was among them. I hadn't aired that coat at the races, so—you know me—I had to show off!

But the biggest laugh of the day is when they call, through the loud speaker, all cars for the stars and producers, and they drive off with a flourish, just as though they had attended one of their own previews.

Understand the reason ace directors Bob Leonard and Clarence Brown haven't signed those MGM contracts yet is because they know the figures on Mervyn LeRoy's contract. And it's been hinted Mervyn got a bonus to boot. They insist on being producers and directors, too.

Hady "Ecstasy" La Marr is making a test with Charles Boyer to do a remake on "Flesh and the Devil." Hm-hm—won't that be something!

Myron Selznick, actors' agent and manager, won the first round in the battle of the century, which has been going on in our little town, when Joe Schenck, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, barred Myron from their lot.

Joe today called Bill Powell personally on the telephone to discuss a new picture deal.

"If it's about business, Joe, you'll have to take it up with my manager, Myron Selznick," said Powell.

Turns G-Man

who, like Humphrey Bogart, usually has been cast on the screen as a tough hombre, bent on violating the law. In "Tip-Off Girls," his next film, the grim Mr. Nolan will be seen as a G-man, who breaks up the truck piracy racket.

Tony Opera Find, Sings Pagliacci

Executives at Twentieth Century-Fox are excited over a new operatic voice discovery. The voice is owned by none other than Tony Martin, whose unusual range and timbre was uncovered by Jule Styne, studio vocal coach.

Tony had never tried grand opera before in his life, but Styne, realizing his possibilities, secretly called in Mark Markoff, leading barytone formerly with the Imperial Russian Opera, to give the young singer special lessons. As a consequence Tony will sing the Prologue to Pagliacci in "Kentucky Moonshine," the Ritz Brothers' starring musical.

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, MARCH 1, 1938 17

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post

New York, Feb. 28.—Matchmaker Al Weill says the middleweight championship situation is terribly muddled — "fortunately."

Rotund Weill smiles a cherubic smile and nurses his big cigar contentedly every time he thinks of the middleweight muddle. Because it will be his job to clarify the picture. And, as matchmaker of Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Club, he relishes such clarification, which can be accomplished only with several fine indoor brawls and a big outdoor battle in the summer.

Nothing delights a matchmaker more than prospects of good matches, apparently easy to make, and packed with crowd appeal.

Weill tilted his gray hat back, above his broad face, and beamed across his desk. He explained:

"Freddie Steele is middleweight champion, recognized in New York State and by the National Boxing Association. But Steele was knocked out in January by Fred Apostoli, of San Francisco. The only reason Steele didn't lose the title that night was because it was an over-the-weight match."

Weill emphasized that Apostoli, before the Steele bout, also had knocked out veteran Marcel Thil, of France, who was recognized as champion by European boxing bodies. By virtue of the Thil and Steele kayoes, Apostoli was hailed as "uncrowned king of the middleweights."

After the Steele bout, Apostoli won the decision over Glen Lee, of Nebraska, in a hard fight. Lee provided the Frisco bellhop with such stiff opposition that Weill re-matched them for a 15-round return bout at Madison Square Garden, to be staged on April 1.

Meanwhile, mighty Apostoli journeyed to his native San Francisco and was the victim of a major upset when beaten in 10 rounds by Young Corbett 3d. This was a very close bout, according to Pacific Coast boxing writers, many of whom thought it should have been a draw or that Apostoli should have received the decision.

Regardless of the merits of the decision, Apostoli lost much luster in the Corbett bout. Corbett had been regarded as just another 160-pound opponent who was trying a come-back. Although Corbett once wore the welterweight crown, many experts considered him virtually "washed up," before he tangled with the Frisco Italian.

Hence, we have Steele—a champion who stills wears the crown merely because of the weight technically. We have his nontitle conqueror, Apostoli, given a hard fight by Lee and beaten by Corbett. We have Corbett suddenly smashing into the picture and insisting that he now is "uncrowned king" by virtue of his victory over Apostoli. We have Lee determined to duplicate Corbett's victory when he clashes with Apostoli again on April 1.

"I'm not sure yet whether we will match Corbett with the Apostoli-Lee winner," Weill continued, "or whether we will bring Corbett here from the Coast and let him show his wares first against Solly Krieger, of Brooklyn, who is still very much in the picture. I figure that if Corbett can prove against Krieger that his San Francisco victory wasn't a fluke, then he would be a much better drawing card in New York when matched with the Apostoli-Lee winner.

"There is also a strong probability that, if Lee beats Apostoli in their return bout, we would then be practically forced to match Lee and Apostoli for a third or 'rubber' match to find out who really is the better. The winner of that third match then would meet the Corbett-Krieger winner. And the ultimate winner then would be matched with Steele for a big outdoor title fight at Yankee Stadium for this summer."

Weill stressed that the summer middleweight title fight would be one of the major bouts of the year—a battle certain to draw a huge crowd and a big gate.

"Right now there is more interest in the 160-pound division than in any of the other classes excepting the heavyweight," the matchmaker continued. "We have more good fighters among the middleweights than in any division, including the heavies. In addition to the big four: Steele, Apostoli, Lee and Corbett, we have Krieger, Teddy Yarosz, Walter Woods, Billy Conn, Fred Hostack, Ralph De Jong, Dick Foster. The competition is as keen now as in the days when Mickey Walker was champ.

"If we only had this kind of a situation in the other divisions, my job would be a cinch and the calendar would be studded with great fights!"

Gopher Five Wins Over Iowa, 30-29.

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 28 (AP).—The University of Minnesota basketball team staged a thrilling late rally here tonight to defeat the University of Iowa, 30 to 29, in the Hawkeyes last game of the season.

The victory put the Gophers in second place ahead of Northwestern in the Big Ten standings, and a full game behind Purdue, which maintained its winning pace by drubbing Chicago, 64 to 33. The Gophers have won eight games and lost threee, and they will finish against Wisconsin at Minneapolis Saturday night.

Nats' Bosses Like Leonard; Hail 'Knuckle-Baller' as Star

Former Atlanta Pitcher Expected to Prove Big Help to Club This Season; Must Lose Weight.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—Undismayed by haunting recollections of last season, the Washington baseball bosses again are toying with the notion that they have a knuckle-ball pitching sensation at their training camp here.

The object of their current affections is big Emil Leonard, a $7,500 investment from the Atlanta Club. Leonard's specialty is an incongruous pitch. He weighs 210, if he weighs a pound, and his big, beefy frame betokens blinding speed on his pitches, but he's a slow-ball pitcher—a knuckler.

He's occupying the same role that handsome Jack Salveson commanded at the Nats training camp last season. Salveson came touted to the Nats as the possessor of the first knuckle ball since Urban Shocker. Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith envisioned Salveson as a 20-game winner. They over-estimated him by 20 games. His knuckle ball jarred every outfield fence in the South. Salveson was dismissed at Chattanooga, en route North.

But they're blithely saying now that Leonard can't miss. "I'd like to have his future," said Harris. "He pitched against us once when he was with Brooklyn and we didn't get a loud foul against him. That Atlanta record of his can't be taken lightly."

The Atlanta record of Leonard's was not bad at that. He won 15 games and lost 8 in a tough league. Before he underwent an operation in mid-summer, he had won 14 games against 5 defeats. Southern Leaguers with the Nats think he's sure-fire to stick in the big league.

"He's the toughest thing I've ever batted against," said First Baseman Jimmy Wasdell, late of Chattanooga.

Loyola Five, Colonials to Play Tonight

G. W. Quintet Will Open Two-Game Series at Tech High Gym.

By Bob Garrison.

Led by 6-foot 9-inch Mike Novak, the country's outstanding center, Loyola University of Chicago's basketball team opens a two-game series with George Washington tonight at Tech High with nothing less at stage than an invitation to the national tournament.

Action is set for 8:30 o'clock tonight and the same time tomorrow.

Both teams are under consideration of the Metropolitan Basketball Writers' Association, of New York, as possible entries in the first annual national tournament scheduled for Manhattan the middle of this month, and the outcome of the two games, today and tomorrow, is expected to write finis to one of the two teams' chances.

George Washington has most to risk, however. Everett Morris, chairman of the association, has notified The Post that the Colonials are already on the preferred list and that a clean sweep of their four remaining games will be tantamount to invitation. One loss, either to Loyola or one of the other two teams on the schedule, would probably kill their chances.

And, from past performance, the fact is gathered that defeating Loyola in double order is just about as stiff an assignment as could be given. Add to that games with Davis and Elkins and Washington and Jefferson, later in the week, and the trip to New York is a very far-fetched idea at the present time.

Loyola holds one victory over the Colonials this season, having defeated them in a three-overtime-period game in Chicago earlier in the season, 47-45. And the defeat was almost a single-handed job of "Snow Mike" Novak, the 6-foot-9-inch center, who paced his dwarfs with 19 points. But now the Ramblers have developed another threat. Besides stopping Novak, George Washington will be troubled with Wibe Kautz, whose scoring of late has given him an average of 11 points per game.

Capt. Tommy O'Brien, stellar set-shot artist and main cog in Colonial offense and defense, will make his last local appearance in a Colonial uniform in the series and should

St. John's Quintet Trounces Invading LaSalle Team, 26-17

Visitors Score Only Eight Points in Last 25 Minutes; Giebel Leads Johnnies With 8 Points.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

St. John's Prep courtmen strengthened their claim for national recognition last night at Catholic University by trouncing an over-rated Lasalle High five of Philadelphia, 26 to 17, before a standing-room-only crowd of 2,000 persons.

The visitors failed to live up to their press clippings as the Quaker City's second best team, scoring only two field goals in the last 25 minutes of play, after taking a 9-to-7 lead late in the initial quarter.

The Johnnies, slated to play in at least two and possibly four tournaments within the next month, including the Evening Star, Glen Falls, Lexington and National Catholic of Chicago, were making their first start since losing o Bethesda, and showed the defeat left no lasting effects.

The visitors were in the game only during the first quarter, when they held a two-point margin. They scored only four points in the second period and just two each in the third and final quarters, the air-tight fedense of the local team and an erring eye offesive causing their downfall.

The LaSalle five led 2-0, 4-2 and 6-4 before Jim Giebel's foul shot adn Fred Battiste's looper from mid-court t hat never touched the rim put the Johnnies ahead at 7-6 McGlone, high scorer for the losers, then converted a foul shot and a field goal for a 9?7 advantage at the quarter.

The nine points proved to be one more than they were to make for the rest of the game, as Gallagher and Swagart escorted the hosts to an 18-12 lead at half time, boosted it to 21-15 at the third quarter, and clinched the victory with a long shot by Battiste at the final gun.

Club Formed At Greenbelt

100 Athletes Join Sports Group at Community.

Residents of Greenbelt have organized the Greenbelt Athletic Club, an organization of 100 members, C. J. Cockill, sports editor of the Greenwelt Weekly Co-operator, announced last night.

The club will sponsor softball, baseball and tennis activities this summer. Diamonds are now being built at Greenbelt, Cockill said, and schedules will shortly be drawn up.

Officers of the newly organized group are: George Bauer, president; Robert Marack, vice president; Phil Claxton, secretary; Vernon Hitchcock, treasurer, and C. J. Cockill, publicity director.

The Greenbelt basketball team will play the Colonial Village cagers tonight at Greenbelt's Community Building. The Greenbelt team includes such athletes as Johnny Bozek, Johnny Lyons, Bob Marack, Butch Reznicky and Howard Sidwell.

Veteran Loses in Second Round of Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., perennial contender for the men's national indoor singles tennis title, today was eliminated in the second round of the 1938 championship by Sidney Seligson, of New York, 6—4, 7—5.

Don McNeill, of Kenyon College and Oklahoma City, ninth in national ranking and second on the seeded list, made a delayed start by scoring a 6—3, 6—4 first-round victory over Melvin H. Partridge, of New Rochelle, N. Y.

Everett D. Collins, Long Meadow, Mass., defeated Paul Graebner, Kenyon College, 6—3, 6—3, and Morey Lewis, Kenyon College, defeated George Pryor, Kenyon College, 6—2, 8—6, in other first-round matches in the men's play.

Bernard Coghlan, of Pacific Palisades, Calif., known chiefly as Bobby Riggs' doubles partner, joined Seligson in the third round by winning out at 6—4, 6—4, over J. Norman Anderson, jr., of Dartmouth and Hoboken, N. J.

Fight Results.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Werther Arcelli, 145½, Boston scored an eight-round upset decision over Bobby Pacho, 148½, Los Angeles in the main bout at the Royal Windsor Palace tonight. It was Pacho's first defeat in his last 13 starts.

Orioles Win In Slugfest

New York Rovers Bow, 7-2, in Wild Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Blasting in four goals in the last period, the Baltimore Orioles walloped the New York Rovers, 7-2, in a wild Eastern Amateur Hockey League contest featured by a free-for-all in the second period, before a slim crowd of 2,000 in Madison Square Garden tonight.

Windy Steele, Baltimore winger, and the Rovers' Ernie Westbury started the battle by swinging fists at each other late in the second session. When husky Ed Gromoll came to Teammate Westbury's aid, the players from both teams poured off the benches and poined the battling. When the excitement died down, Steele and Westbury were thumbed off for minor penalties, while Gromoll received a major. Steele later tangled with Tony Desmarais in the final session and also received a major.

Armstrong Whips Burns

Kayoes Pennsylvanian in 2d Round of Bout.

Minneapolis, Feb. 28 (AP).—Henry Armstrong, world's featherweight champion, made it 34 knockouts out of his last 35 starts by putting away Charley Burns, of Johnstown, Pa., in the second round of their scheduled ten-round nontitle fight here tonight. Armstrong weighed 133 and Burns 136½.

Burns used a good left to advantage, scoring repeatedly in the first round. The second round went one minute and two seconds before Burns was on the canvas with a ten-count tolled over him.

Burns, in the first round, punched crisply and accurately, finding the champion's nose and mouth repeatedly, but Armstrong paid little heed to the blows.

Armstrong's knockout victory was his second since Friday night when he tucked away Everett Rightmire in the third round in Chicago.

In the minute preceding the knockout, Armstrong, working like a machine, chased Burns to all four corners of the ring, spreading out his blows between the body and the face. The knockout came when the champion drove Burns into the ropes and the crisp knockout punch, seemingly coming from nowhere, followed an exchange of comparatively light blows.

Six Games Carded At Y.M.C.A. Court

Double action will be the keynote as second-half play in the Government-"Y" Basketball League continues tonight, with six games scheduled to be played on the two Y. M. C. A. courts.

Tonight's schedule (men's gym): Internal Revenue vs. G. A. O., 7:10; State Department vs. I. C. C., 8:20, and PWA vs. Veterans' Administration, 9:30.

Boy's gym: Public Health vs. Patent Office, 7:10; Farm Credit vs. Bureau of Standards, 8:20, and National Archives vs. A. G. O., 9:30.

Yankee Athletes Snare Major Share of New Track Records

13 of Marks Approved by International Federation Set by Americans; Owens' Mark Accepted.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 28.—The International Amateur Athletic Federation rewrote the track and field record book today.

Although United States athletes walked off with most of the honors as the I. A. A. F. approved 13 new standards established by Americans, including Jesse Owens' disputed 10.2 seconds for 100 meters and Forrest (Spec) Towns' all but incredible 13.7 seconds for the 110-meter high hurdles, Great Britain snared the most prized individual record—that for the outdoor mile.

This went to the credit of spindly shanked, bespectacled Sydney Wooderson, who was clocked in 4:06.4 in a record-smashing performance at London August 28. Wooderson's time, then, was reported as 4:06.6, a tenth of a second faster than Glenn Cunningham's universal standard of 4:06.7, but it was certified to, and approved by, the I. A. A. F. as 4:06.4.

Owens' 10.2 for the metric century made at Chicago early in 1936, finally received international approval after an argument of more than a year.

Other individual records set by Americans and approved today included:

1,000 yards, 2:09.7, by Robinson.

2,000 meters, 5:16.8, by Archie San Romani, of Emporia, Kans.

120 yard high hurdles, 14 seconds flat, by Bob Osgood, University of Michigan.

Pole vault, 14 feet 11 inches by Earle Meadows and Bill Sefton, University of Southern California.

880 yards, Stanford University, 1:25.

One mile, Southern California, 3:11.6.

Two miles and 3,200 meters, United States (Chuck Hornbostel, Robert Young, Harry Williamson and John Woodruff), both 7:35.8.

Four miles, University of Indiana, 7:16.2.

'Hands Off Our Pro Players!' Redskin Owner Tells Colleges

'Those Schools Should Protect Us Like We Protect Them!' Insists Prexy George Marshall.

By Eddie Gilmore,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

When a man bites a dog it's news and when professional football accuses college football of proselytizing pro gridmen—well, it's George Preston Marshall.

"I'm appealing," wailed the owner of the professional champions, the Redskins, "to the sportsmanship of college presidents to protect us from the commercialism of their institutions."

Irked when Columbia University signed his ace ball toter, Cliff Battles, for a coaching job, the sartorially resplendent Marshal flushed the same hue as his tinted shirt when he took stock of what else is happening along this line.

"Look," he snorted, "what Navy's done—it's taken Keith Molesworth from the Chicago Bears. Think of it!"

Last year, he pointed out with rising ire, New Hampshire snagged the fast-running, hard-blocking George Sauer from the Green Bay Packers.

"Professional football," said the Redskins' owner, "has a rule to protect the colleges. We can't sign a school player during the four years he's schooling. They ought to draw up something like that to protect us."

"And——" he added, "if they don't do something to protect us poor professionals, I think this would be a dandy subject for study by the Carnegie Foundation."

Another thing that's got Marshall waving his arms si a rumor that's reached him from Annapolis—that Navy sought to sign the Redskins' quarterback, Riley Smith, to a coaching contract.

"Three years ago the colleges where looking down their noses at us," he boomed. "Now they've moved over on our bench and are making advances."

Having unburdened himself, Marshall screwed up his face, bit his pencil and began figuring on a signing problem of his own—getting Slingin' Sammy Baugh's name to a 1938 contract.

"I only wish I had the collegiate technique," he sighed.

Bright Is Given Verdict Over Lash

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—The new indoor "Citizens Record" for 3 miles belongs to Norman, of the San Francisco Olympic Club, and not to Don Lash, it developed today.

A Madison Square Garden announcer said Lash had set the new mark of 14:14.8 en route in a close victory over Bright, in the 5,000-meter run of the national A. A. U. championships Saturday night.

Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., revealed today that Bright was leading Lash by 2 step or two at the 3-mile mark and that the new record therefore belonged to him. The old "Citizen's Record" of 14:29.4 was set by George Bonhag in 1910.

Semiwindup Battle Lost By Mamakos

Milwaukee Youth Given Majority Decision Over Local Boy.

Bowen Wins Over Swetnam; Esrick, Baker Take Prelims.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The District Boxing Commission's initial venture in the matchmaking business was crowned with success last night at Turner's Arena where George Abrams, local middleweight, lost and won a split eight-round decision over tough Tony Ciaccio.

A gathering of some 1,500 fans, lured through the turnstiles by the inviting prospect of witnessing the local boy's first defeat as a professional, saw him out punched and out generalled in five of the eight sessions, only to have the decision handed to him on a platter.

Two rounds, the third and fourth, in which he was penalized for hitting on the break and butting in the clinches, cost Ciaccio the fight. Judge Frank Schuyler voted for him anyway, but Judge Bob Eller awarded it to Abrams. They put the deciding ballot up to Referee Charley Reynolds, and he voted for the local boy.

Fight Rated Even.

Reynolds had the fight all even going into the final round, counting points detracted from Ciaccio's score for the alleged fouls, and that put the issue strictly up to Abrams. He came through magnificently, boxing and fighting like a genuine championship prospect. George finished well enough, but experienced rough sledding in the earlier going.

Even though the decision was not unanimously satisfactory, the bout proved, at least, that Abrams has a fighting heart, and like it was evident that he has a long way to go before he can successfully essay jousts with ranking middleweights.

Ciaccio, as rugged as Steve Mamakos but more experienced, started fast, whipping left hooks to Abrams mid-section. He chased him into a corner and stung him with a brace of lefts to the head, and continued to dog the harrased Huron Club fighter.

Abrams regained some of his poise in the second round and gamely returned his opponent's fire, but Ciaccio's cover-up tactics, strongly reminiscent of Henry Irving's style, prevented him from doing any damage.

Abrams Is Spun Around.

Abrams concentrated his attack on the head, and the blows glanced off. Ciaccio drew his first warning and penalty in this round for hitting on the break and butting.

Abrams was boxing better as the fourth opened, and shot a light left and right to the head. Ciaccio, however, caught him high on the right temple and spun him half-way around with a looping left.

Ciaccio was penalized again for fouling, and, infuriated by the ruling, came running from his corner for the fifth, whipped an overhand left to the head and promptly ducked back into his shell. Abrams continued trying to land with a left jab, but his progress was blocked by a flock of elbows and gloves.

They fell to with a will in the sixth, slugging away with both hands, and this time Abram's blows began to have effect. Ciaccio stopped abruptly, peered over the tip of his leather fortress and prided in again but George was on his toes and re ady for him. The District boy belted him to the body with both hands, and drove a steaming right to the heart, but it wasn't enough to discourage Ciaccio.

Abrams Continues Rally.

Abrams continued his rally in the seventh, and, with exception of sparodic outbursts from the opposite corner, had the better of it. Ciaccio, however, was plugging away, breaking out in a rash of lefts to the head and rights to the body, but encountering more stubborn resistence.

The eighth, and what proved to be the winning round for Abrams, opened with a couple of bangs, one to the side of Abrams reddened face, and another to Ciaccio's body. The Washington boy was boxing better and finding the range more frequently. He worked his way in close and pounded both hands to the body, slowing up Ciaccio perceptibly. George shot a light right to the head, and took a left hook to the body at the bell.

Bernstein Is Victor.

"Toots" Bernstein and Steve Mamakos provided a stirring anticlimax to the finale, going eight swift rounds, with Bernstein winning a unanimous decision.

The Milwaukee mixer's timing was well nigh perfect and after a stormy first round he came on to win by a decisive margin. Mamakas chook his teeth with a pair of punishing rights to the head in the opening stanza, but was in no immediate danger of doing further damage thereafter.

Bernstein, utilizing his experience and skill to best advantage, bobbed and weaved under the Golden Greek's wild rights, stepped inside his left and retaliated with point-getting jabs to the face and left hooks to the body. He staggered Mamakos in the seventh with a straight right to the mouth, but couldn't use the mitt for a second punch. It was injured in the second round when it came in contact with a very solid portion of the Greek's anatomy.

In the other preliminaries, Brooks Bowen won a majority decision over Doug Swetnam; Johnny Esrick won a unanimous verdict from disgusted Bill Temes, and Rusty Baker thumped his way to

War Minstrel Wins Classic At Hialeah

Takes Biscayne Bay by Half a Length Over Caballero.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 28. The last week of the Miami Jockey Club's 46-day meeting opened today with the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup, mile and a quarter closing-day feature, the only topic heard where racing clans gather. Today's feature, the 1-mile Biscayne Bay Purse, served to afford a further line one some of the candidates being prepped for the big fling at Champion War Admiral.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's War Minstrel, fourth in the recent McLennan Memorial, drove to a half length victory in 1:37 3-5. Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Chilean veteran, Caballero II, was a most impressive second, three lengths before Woolford Farm's Robert L., the only started not named for the Widener. Columbiana, last year's winner, was fourth, Rushaway was Fifth and Teufel last.

War Minstrel, topweight under 117 pounds and ridden by Paul Ryan, was a close second to Caballero II, paying $6.20 for two.

Although War Minstrel was first home, the race run by Caballero II earned more Widener prestige than the winner's performance. War Minstrel showed both speed and gameness in first racing the speedy Teufel into the ground and then sticking it out long enough to beat the favorite. However, Eddie Arcaro could not keep Caballero II close enough in the early stages of the 8-furlong test. He got the big fellow to running around the last bend and drove him through between the leaders at the last turn.

The Chilean was wearing War Minstrel down in the final drive and gave the impression that he would have run over the winner at more than a mile. Robert L. only saved the show by a head from Columbiana, which exhibited a promising stretch spurt.

Arcaro Wins Again.

Eddie Arcaro, husky saddle artist who piloted five winners out of seven mounts Flamingo Day, picked up where he left off Saturday by winning the first race on today's card. The leading pilot at the meeting was astride Express, a first-time starter that was listed as a "field" horse in the 3-furlong dash for maiden juveniles. Eddie's mount swerved in from an outside position soon after the break, opened up daylight and won by two lengths to pay $13.20. Beau Do was the chief contender all the way and lasted to head Dark Sweet out of the place. The favored Friendly Paul closed too late for more than fourth money.

Coming from many lengths out of it with a spectacular rally in the last quarter mile, Notice Me just got up to squeeze out a photo decision over Grey Fluff in the 6-furlong second contest. Scottish Mary, the choice, was only a neck behind. Grey Fluff, hustled along all the way, outlasted Scottish Mary and Blakeen and seemed a winner until the remarkable finish staged by Notice Me. The latter was well played, returning $9.70 for two.

Grand Duke, recently claimed from the Denemark barn by former Jockey "Whitey" Abel, sped home at the first asking and paid the liberal odds of $45.20 for two in the third race of 7 furlongs. With Sterling Youn handling the reins, the gelded son of Stimulus wore down Free Again in the first 5 furlongs, then breezed away to win by four lengths in 1:25 flat. Absconder, with Eddie Arcaro up, made a game stretch try and earned the runner-up position by a head over Bellum.

Flying Lee Comes Back.

H. P. Headley's Flying Lee, winner of a mile race in the mud her last outing, came right back in the mile and a sixteenth turf course event and made it two straight. Jimmy Stout drove the filly home by a length, the combination paying $21.30. Jon-Jon was second, a length and a half before Weekly Stipend. Xavier was a dull running favorite. Flying Lee finally shook off Weekly Stipend inside the last furlong, then held Jon-Jon's rally at bay.

Wirephotos: Hartnett and Vitt Getting Ready

With his mask pushed back and sweat rolling down his cheeks, "Gabby" Hartnett (left), the Chicago Cubs' indestructable catcher, faces the 1938 baseball season with the wide grin fans know all around the circuit. The wide-mouthed gentleman on the right is Oscar Vitt, new manager of the Cleveland Indians. Gabby is at Catalina Island and Vitt is at New Orleans.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EXPRESS (field), $13.20, $5.70, $4.70; BEAU DO, $5.10, $4.00; DARK SWEET, $4.70.

EXPRESS broke fast under vigorous handling. She drew out after the opening furlong while awarding in front of the field, but held her advantage. FRIENDLY DO broke well, but was a trifle slow in settling into his stride. He closed gamely through the stretch to wear down DARK SWEET in the last stride. DARK SWEET was away swiftly, but tired in the final eighth.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:31. Off at 2:40. Winner, M. B. Lewis' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOTICE ME, $9.70, $5.70, $3.10; GREY FLUFF, $3.10, $3.20; SCOTTISH MARY, $2.30.

NOTICE ME away slowly and outrun in the early stages, responded courageously to urging while circling the field in the final quarter mile and wore GREY FLUFF down in the final stride. GREY FLUFF displayed good speed, raced BLAKEEN into submission in the early running and continued gamely when placed to a drive, but could not withstand the winner's bid. SCOTTISH MARY, prominent all the way, made a bold effort through the stretch, but could not get up.

Daily double, Express and Notice Me, paid $84.10.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:08. Winner, A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAND DUKE, $45.20, $21.10, $11.50; ABSCONDER, $6.20, $5.40; BELLUM, $5.00.

GRAND DUKE, prominent contender all the way, shook off FREE AGENT entering the stretch, after the latter had carried him wide, and won going away under strong handling. ABSCONDER, compelled to race wide the entire trip, responded gamely to punishment and outlasted BELLUM in the final drive. BELLUM broke tardily and, outrun early, closed a big gap in the last half mile to finish full of run.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000. Class C. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:39½. Winner, H. P. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING LEE, $21.30, $9.80, $5.50; JON JON, $5.50, $4.30; WEEKLY STIPEND, $5.90.

FLYING LEE rushed to the first turn, assumed a short lead in the early running, was taken back slightly rounding the lower turn and came to the outside in the final quarter mile, taking command, and was doing her best at the finish. JON JON, on the outside all the way, dropped back on the lower turn, responded gamely to punishment and came again, but raced in tight quarters approaching the furlong pole. WEEKLY STIPEND, keen factor while saving much ground all the way, faltered in the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:08. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's ch. g. (6), by Hourless—Queen of Wenonah. Trained by A. E. Tiexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOTLEY, $4.90, $3.60, $2.60; KINROSS, $4.20, $3.30; SHOT UP, $3.70.

MOTLEY took command at once, opened up a long lead at his leisure rounding the first turn, then, rated in front under steadying restraint, won as his rider pleased. KINROSS, always in nearest pursuit of the leader, maintained his position determinedly. SHOT UP responded gamely to punishment and outlasted MIDSHIPMAN.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Biscayne Bay. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:40½. Winner, Mrs. E. Denemark's b. h. (4), by Royal Minstrel—War Feathers. Trained by W. Booth. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:47 2-5, 1:12, 1:37 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAR MINSTREL, $6.20, $3.30, $2.70; CABALLERO, II, $2.80, $2.60; ROBERT L., $4.60.

WAR MINSTREL displayed high speed and raced TEUFEL into defeat in the opening 5 furlongs. He drew out on the stretch turn but then had to be energetically urged to withstand CABALLERO II's challenge. CABALLERO II, under stout restraint in the early running, moved up steadily rounding the lower turn, but Arcaro took him behind the leaders on the stretch turn and he was lucky to slip through between the field and then closed with a belated rush. ROBERT L., well up for the entire trip, finished gamely to punishment and held COLUMBIANA safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:12. Winner, A. C. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INDIAN HEAD, $5.00, $4.50, $2.60; WHICHAWAY, $11.40, $3.00; BOMBER, $3.00.

INDIAN HEAD, quickest to begin, drew clear rounding the first turn under steadying restraint and held away the entire journey, but had to be briskly urged to stave off WHICHAWAY'S challenge. WHICHAWAY, outrun in the early stages, gained steadily while racing on the outside in the final half mile, but could not overtake the winner. BOMBER followed in nearest pursuit of the leader throughout, but faltered in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:47. Winner, Mrs. T. M. Cowrill's ch. g. (6), by Sun God II—Carry Un. Trained by H. E. Brown. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:39 4-5, 2:04.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILLIAM V., $10.10, $3.70, $3.20; BAILIWICK, $4.80, $3.60; BLUE KING, $8.30.

WILLIAM V. away slowly, gradually bettered his position on the outside and, responding courageously when the final issue came, outlasted BAILIWICK. The latter, well up from the start, finished gamely to pressure, but could not stave off the winner. BLUE KING sprinted into a clear lead going to the first turn, saved ground the remainder of the trip, but faltered in the stretch.

Sports Postscripts

When Coach BURT SHIPLEY called out pitching and catching candidates for the Maryland University baseball team last week he was a little disappointed that EDDIE "Choo-Choo" JOHNSON was not among those seeking a mound assignment . . . SHIP knew that the son of WALTER, the greatest pitcher of them all, didn't plan to report until the infielders are called out, but believes that he would be a great pitcher . . . BENNY ALPERSTEIN, Maryland's classy little boxer, defeated JOE MURNICK, of North Carolina, for the Southern Conference 125-pound championship, Saturday, then they got their dates and went to a dance together . . . Both are members of Tau Epsilon Pi which held its formal at the Mayflower after the bouts, but they didn't act like fraternity brothers until the scrap was ended. . . . .

Before the Georgetown University freshman basketball team defeated St. Andrew's yesterday it elected JOHN McGOWAN, of Asbury Park, N. J., captain . . . MAC was captain of the Asbury Park High team for two years before going to the Hilltop, being all-high and all-prep in the State as well as captain of the baseball team . . . Whew . . . AL LEVINSON, who helps GOLDIE AHEARN peddle ties and shirts at his haberdashery, has taken over the local agency for Ring and Bang magazines and reports that business is very good, thank you . . . Loyola University's basketball team was so injury plagued and riddled by scholastic losses that Coach LENNIE SACHS was forced to put his student manager into uniform to round out a squad to make the present trip to the Capital . . . It seems the rumors that TOMMY O'BRIEN will become a boxer were blasted yesterday when the George Washington University basketball captain told friends that he's never boxed and furthermore has no intentions of punching either as an amateur or pro . . .

WARDEN LEWIS E. LAWES, of Sing Sing Prison, may soon contribute a special article to a certain boxing magazine . . . George Washington University will start spring football practice, Monday, but Coach BILL REINHART would be pleased to turn the duties over to BOTCHEY KOCK, his assistant, if he can get a bid to the National Tournament in New York on the 9th for his basketball team . . . HAL KEISEL, former Colonial center, will lead the Y-Government League all-stars, when they clash with another group of Government stars, Thursday at Heurich's Gym for the Hot Lunch Fund . . .

Lefty Gomez and Red Ruffing Sign Contracts

Both Given Pay Raises, Reports Say

Gomez' Salary May Be $18,500 and Red's Now $15,000.

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28.—Simultaneously with the opening spring workout of the Champion New York Yankees here today came the announcement that the team's two star pitchers, Vernon Gomez and Charley Ruffing, had signed their 1938 contracts and would report to camp immediately.

Capitulation of the two mound aces left unsigned only four regulars of the club that crushed the Giants in the last World Series. They are Lou Gehrig, Frankie Crosetti and Red Rolfe, infielders, and Joe DiMaggio, centerfielder. They are not due to report here until next Monday.

The only other unsigned Yankee was Spurgeon Chandler, a young pitcher who made a good start last season before illness and a lame arm knocked him out. He is understood to be seeking a bonus clause.

Both Given Raises.

Both Gomez and Ruffing returned their original contracts and it was assumed that each received an increase. Gomez, who received $13,500 last year, was believed to have signed for around $18,500. Ruffing, who held out long and vigorously last year before accepting $15,000, probably got a $1,000 boost.

Gomez, the eccentric southpaw, won 21 games and lost 11 and led the American League in effectiveness last season. Also, he capsized the Giants twice in the big series. Righthander Ruffing had a record of 20 and 7 in the regular season and won his only start against the Giants.

Gehrig, DiMaggio Expected.

Gehrig and DiMaggio, the team's outstanding run-producers, were expected to arrive by the first of next week and go into a huddle with Col. Jake Ruppert about their respective contracts, despite Gehrig's insistence he wouldn't stir a foot outside of New York until he had signed.

The champions' first workout lasted two hours and consisted of a light batting drill, calisthenics and a few jogs around the track.

DiMaggio Has New Argument for Yanks.

San Francisco, Feb. 28 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, who is having contract difficulties with his New York Yankee bosses, has a new "popular player" incident to use as an argument for his salary demands:

Three baseballs he autographed yesterday in Santa Rosa enriched a benefit fund by $73. A thousand fans all tried to shake hands with him at the same time.

DiMaggio accompanied the San Francisco Seals Club, which played a Santa Rosa semipro team in a benefit game. Joe gave a hitting exhibition, but popped up most of the balls.

he have a "hot" hand, he'll probably more than offset the antics of Novak.

Has Capable Aides.

With Tommy will be Jack Butterworth, Bob Faris, George Garber and Sid Silkowitz. After a week of practice with a fast-breaking offense and a man-for-man defense they are ready and eager to make a determined try for the New York invitation.

Their last game resulted in an impressive victory over St. John's, of New York, and gave them a record of ten victories and three losses. Only Toledo and Long Island, besides Loyola, have been able to best the G street five. Ohio State, Tennessee, Minnesota, Wayne twice, West Virginia, Westminster, Elon, Baltimore, besides St. John's, have been defeated.

Loyola, captained by Bob Brennan, has won 12 games in 17. Three recent losses on the road played havoc with what was taking form as a downright sensational season. Nebraska and South Dakota took 1-point victories, and Xavier avenged an earlier loss all recently as injuries wrecked the crew.

Coached by Sachs.

The Ramblers are coached by Lennie Sachs, one of the country's outstanding mentors, and held the Chicago city title last year. In Novak, at center, they possess a player who does more damage on the offensive than on the defensive, if possible. It will be remembered that last year he deflected enough balls from the path of the basket to win a close 36-34 game from George Washington. Rule revisions this year force him to modify his style of play but he's still a hard man to shoot over when he's playing his roving center position in the Ramblers' zone defense.

He'll be aided by Bill O'Brien, George Hogan, Brennan and Kautz.

2 Sandlot Ball Loops Plan Opening Meetings

The Departmental League will meet Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at the Atlas Sports Store, 927 D street northwest. On Thursday night the Capital Baseball League will meet at the Pepco Service Station at Tenth street and Florida avenue northwest. With several vacancies in both leagues, managers seeking to enter their teams in leagues are asked to get in touch with "Vic" Gauzza at Metropolitan 6878.

Tony Ciaccio (right) appears to be going into the audience for assistance as George Abrams drove him into, and partially through the hemp inclosure with both fists in their bout last night at the Arena. This was one of the local lad's few offensive flurries in the earlier rounds, but he closed stoutly to win a split, and much criticized, decision.

Thunderbird, Russian Meet

Chief Thunderbird, red-hot redskin rassler, and Boris Demitroff, Hoboken Russian, have been signed for a 30-minute bout Thursday night at the Arena in support of the feature match between Dr. John Murphy and Jesse James.

The chief has been here before, nine times to be exact, and has won every time. The record includes a draw with James, a lad the Indian would be very pleased to meet again sometime, and victories over many lesser lights.

A colorful performer, the Indian usually brings along a fellow darkface, Swift Eagle, who helph the chief on and off with his robe, supplies a rich barytone for the warwhoops Thunderbird emits every now and then, and performs other minor chores. Swift Eagle, however, does not help pin the opposition.

Frisch to Direct Cardinal Practice From Grandstand

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28.—Frankie Frisch is ready to try out his crutches.

The St. Louis Cardinal manager's right foot, in which two bones were broken when he suffered a fall at the club's baseball school in Winter Haven, Fla., last week, has been placed in a cast and it will be at least 10 days before Frisch will be able to get around much.

The boss of the Gas House Gang plans to direct his pitchers and catchers, who arrive tomorrow at the club's spring base here, from a grandstand box at Waterfront Park.

Score of Yachts In Havana Race

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Twenty or more yachts flying the flags of three nations will compete in the tenth annual St. Petersburg-to-Havana race this week end.

One of the oldest international sailing competitions on the Eastern seaboard, the race will be staged over a 284-nautical-mile course extending from St. Petersburg along the Florida West Coast to Havana Harbor.

The record of 39 hours 25 minutes 55 seconds for the event was established in 1937 by the Sirocco, a 44-foot cutter, owned and sailed by Frank Robinson, of New Haven, Conn.

Cunningham Set To Race Against Time in Boston

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—Supremeover all opposition encountered thus far this season, Glenn Cunningham, erstwhile Kansas miler who now runs for the New York Curb Exchange A. C., will attempt this week to complete the fastest indoor mile in history.

Cunningham will go to Hanover, N. H., on Thursday to run against a stopwatch on the fast Dartmouth College track. Dartmouth's board runway measures 6 2-3 laps to the mile. In the opinion of virtually all Eastern track experts it is the fastest indoor track in America. It is, for instance, nearly six times as large as the track in Madison Square Garden, here, the racing strip on which Cunningham, last Saturday night, set a ne wworld's record of 3:48.4, for the 1,500 meters. The former and still official mark was 3:49.9.

Don Lash to Wed Miss Mendenhall

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 28 (AP).—Don Lash, Indiana University's crack distance runner, tonight announced his engagement and approaching marriage to Miss Margaret Mendenhall, of Pendleton, Ind.

Lash, at a banquet sponsored by Fort Wayne Alumni of Delta Chi, his fraternity, said the marriage would take place June 18, in New York. Both lash and Miss Mendenhall are Indiana University graduates.

Locals Face King College

The most famous fighting family in Southern collegiate ranks invades Turner's Arena three brothers strong Friday night when the Red Ravagers of King College, Bristol, Tenn., engage Columbus University's fighting Explorers in the final match of Columbus U.'s 1938 schedule.

Featuring an undefeated welterweight in Capt. Bill Wilkinson, King College also is represented by Dave Wilkinson, 126 pounds, and Warren Wilkinson, 135 pounds.

Warren is fourth of the fighting Wilkinsons to have enrolled with King College within the past three years, brother "Stoopy" Wilkinson having been lost by graduation. Capt. Bill Wilkinson, incidentally, is undefeated and ace of his team.

King College looms favorite over the Columbus team that has lost its last two starts to The Citadel and Villanova. The locals won two previous matches, 4½ to 3½ and 5 to 3.

Galiano Beaten By Howard Scott

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Feb. 28.—Cowboy Howard Scott, Washington, D. C., battler, decisioned Pete Galiano here tonight in a 10-round encounter before 1,600 fans in the Richmond Armory. Evil Eye Finkel was in Scott's corner.

The weights were 137 for Scott and 140 for Galiano.

A Shot That Failed in St. John's Game

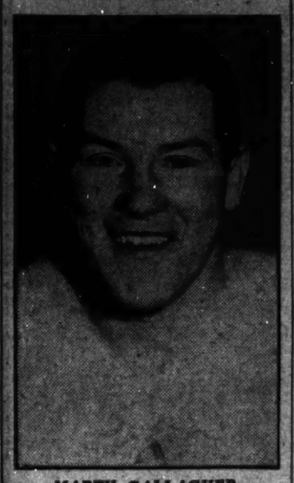
Marty Gallagher Quits Ring; Seeks Policeman's Post



MARTY GALLAGHER.

Marty Gallagher, popular District heavyweight, is quitting the ring to become a Metropolitan policeman.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, revealed this yesterday after a conversation with Gallagher. Brown said he was surprised at Gallagher's request and promised to do all in his power to speed up the fighter's appointment.

Gallagher admitted to Chief Brown that he was tired of the ring after nearly a decade, during which he won and lost in spurts.

It will probably be a year before he can hope to start "pounding a beat," Brown said. But Gallagher is now only 29, which leaves him several years before he reaches the age limit.

Griffith Puts Faith In Rookie Pitchers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—Clark Griffith, who has personally sponsored the Nats' rookie lefthanders, Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas, today offered to wager that they would be pitching sensations in 1938.

"They're both young kids, but they can't miss," said Griffith, who last year labored long with the pair in an attempt to improve their pitching form. "I'll make a small bet that they win more games for us next season than any two right-handers on the Washington Club and that includes Wes Ferrell and Jimmy DeShong.

a unanimous victory over willing Chief Wahoo Wilson.

Dundee to Challenge Gevinson to Fight.

Chris Dundee, manager of Norment Quarles, of Richmond, Va., last night announced he would challenge Lou Gevinson for a ten-round bout for the lightweight championship of the South. The bout, if terms can be arranged, would be fought at Griffith Stadium on one of the early outdoor programs Dundee said he would post a guarantee of $1,000 in token of his good faith.

Matt Twomey, Gevinson's pilot, said he would not agree to such a bout until late in the summer, and for a sizable slice of the gate receipts. Furthermore, he would like to box Petey Sarron first.

Washington Man Paces Rifle Shoot

Florham Park, N. J., Feb. 28 (U.P.). The Roseland Skeet Club was the only titleholder which still had its crown in the Middle Atlantic Skeet Shooting championships today, four individual champions having been supplanted over the week-end.

Only two birds short of the world's record made by the California Skeet Club in 1936, the Roseland all-gauge team of five broke 491 out of 500 yesterday.

Dave Sklaar, of Brooklyn, N. Y., hit 24 out of 25 birds in near-darkness to win the individual high gun championship in a third shoot-off.

The high over all record for the most birds in the two-day shoot went to George C. Deyoe, of Washington, D. C., who defeated E. E. Garland, of Belleville, 24 to 23, after they had been tied at 285.

Georgetown Frosh Beat St. Andrews

The Georgetown University freshmen basketball team ended its season undefeated yesterday by winning over St. Andrews High, of Roanoke, Va., 44-34.

The Hoya frosh piled up a substantial lead in the first quarter and were ahead at the half, 29-11.

Jack Dempsey Coming Here To Referee Fights at Arena

Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, once removed, is coming to Washington next Monday to conduct a sales campaign and referee a bout at Turner's Arena. It is the refereeing in which sports fans are most interested.

A successful businessman, as his well-rounded girth attests, Dempsey is primarily interested in increasing the sales volume of his distillery products, only recently placed on the market. But the old flame of sportsmanship lingers on, and the reformed Manassa Mauler steps into the arena every now and then to officiate.

Dempsey agreed to appear here at a conference with Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, staged on the run and in a tunnel at the depot. The only condition was that he be given a good fight to work, and Ahearn is leaving no stone unturned to meet the request.

Joey Archibald, best remembered for his eighth-round technical knockout over Lou Gevinson, is being sought as one of the two principals. The matchmaker, however, has no assurance he will be available, inasmuch as the Providence pugilist likes to go first class in regard to purses.

"He's askin' for $750 for a indoor show," Ahearn stated. "It's too much. He must think we print money in de beck room of de Arena. I'll sign him for $500 and nod a penny more."

If Archibald is signed, his opponent, in all probability, will be little Al Reid, who dealt Tony Dupre a slashing defeat in his last appearance here. Reid was supposed to meet Lou Gevinson, but ducked out of the match, pointing out that Gevinson is a natural lightweight and too big for him.

School Nines In 21 Games

Baseball Series Starts April 7 With 2 Games.

With seven schools competing, the largest number ever to participate in an interhigh series in the history of local athletics, the scholastic baseball campaign will start on April 8, with Roosevelt meeting Eastern at Roosevelt and Tech at Wilson.

Dates for the annual interhigh track and field meet were also announced, May 28 and 29, in Central Stadium. The preliminaries will be run off at 3:15 p. m. on Wednesday, the 28th, with finals on Thursday.

Twenty-one games are on the diamond slate, with each team playing the other once. It runs from April 8 to June 7, when Eastern and Tech will close the season. Two games are to be played on six of the dates.

Birch Bayh, director of scholastic athletics, also announced the tennis and golf schedules will be available soon.

H. K. Bosley, of the Woodrow Wilson faculty, will retain his post as chairman of the baseball series.

Bache Acquires Westheimer's Local Branch

New York Stock Exchange Firms Announce Merger of Offices Here.

J. S. Bache & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, announced yesterday the merging of Westheimer & Co.'s local office with their Washington branch. The personnel of Westheimer & Co.'s office here will assume duties in the Bache office in the Washington Hotel today. Westheimer & Co. are members of the New York Stock Exchange, with their main office in Cincinnati and branches in Baltimore and Dayton, Ohio.

A. Harmer Reeside has been Westheimer & Co.'s local manager. He has been in the brokerage business for 17 years. Until 1928, when the pressure of other duties forced him to resign his membership, which he had held for four years, he was one of the youngest members of the Washington Stock Exchange. He also attended the Naval Academy at Annapolis. His father, Howard S. Reeside, was formerly president of the Washington Gas Light Co. and vice president of the American Security & Trust Co.

Miss Bessie Shoor, who has been with Westheimer & Co.'s local office for 15 years, is one of the few women in Washington rated as "customer's man" by the New York Stock Exchange. John H. Clarke, another member, was formerly manager here for Iglehart & Co.

43 Bache Offices in the U. S.

This new acquisition by J. S. Bache & Co. is in line with their policy of expansion. The firm now has 43 offices in the principal cities in the United States and in Toronto, Canada, and London, England. It also has representatives in other foreign financial centers, including Paris and Alexandria, Egypt. They are members of all the important exchanges here and in Canada.

Along with other changes, the local Bache branch has added to their commodity staff James A. Hennessy, who has been associated with the firm here since 1932.

Frank J. F. Thiel, former assistant Treasurer of the United States, is the local manager, and Leon B. Brubaker, the assistant manager. The other members of the staff are John T. Pelton, E. Frank Bastable and Philip P. Friedlander.

Coca-Cola's Profits Up to $22,881,616

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Coca-Cola Co. reported today net income for 1937 was $22,881,616, equal to $5.72 a common share, after reserves, taxes, Class A dividends and all other charges. This compared to 1936 net income of $18,598,078, or $4.65 a share.

Fourth quarter income after these charges was $3,863,716, or 97 cents a common share, compared to $3,683,556, or 92 cents a share, for the 1936 fourth quarter, and to $3,041,700, or $2.01 a share for the third quarter 1937. A dividend of 50 cents on the common was declared payable April 1, to stock of record March 12. During 1937 the company paid a dividend of 50 cents each on April 1 and July 1, and of 75 cents on October 1 and December 15, plus an extra of $2 on the last date.

A.T.&T.'37 Net $9.76 a Share

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported today for last year consolidated net income of $182,342,866, equal to $9.76 a share on the capital stock. This compared with $184,741,464 or $9.89 a share in 1936.

Walter S. Gifford, president, in a review of the company's operations, disclosed that the number of telephones in Bell System reached a new high, totaling at the end of the year 15,332,000 against the previous 1930 record of 15,193,000.

Total operating revenues of the Bell System in 1937 were $1,051,400,000, an increase of $56,500,000 over 1936. Expenses increased $69,000,000. Cash assets at the end of the year, including funds temporarily invested in Government obligations, totaled $153,000,000. At the close of 1936, similar cash assets amounted to $219,548,000. In large part the decline was due to expenditures for plant additions. For the year such expenditures amounted to $323,900,000, with plant retirements amounting to $193,600,000.

At the end of the year there were 642,000 stockholders with average holdings of 29 shares. This was a small increase over 1936.

Steel Operations Dip To 29.3 Per Cent

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 1.1 points to 29.3 per cent of capacity, compared with 30.4 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 30.5 per cent of capacity while a year ago they stood at 85.8 per cent.

Argentine Wheat Crop.

Buenos Aires, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The agriculture ministry's second official estimate for the 1937-38 crop year tonight forecast Aregentine wheat production at 5,000,000 metric tons (11,042,841,400 pounds) equivalent to 184,047,356 bushels of 60 pounds.

SEC Expels 1, Suspends 2 From Big Board

Penalty Effective on All Exchanges on Which Accused Had Seats.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission expelled Charles C. Wright, member of the New York and other stock exchanges, from national securities exchanges yesterday because of alleged stock manipulation. The commission also found that Herbert King and Norman Stern, also members of the New York Stock Exchange, were involved with Wright and suspended them for a year beginning April 30.

The trio was accused of causing an artificial run-up of the price of Kinner Airplane & Motor Corporation stock from 46 to 75 cents in five days starting September 11, 1935, on the Los Angeles Exchange.

The commission found that Wright & Sexton, of which Wright is a member, had no part as a firm in the alleged manipulation. It also took no action against Arnold & Co., of which King and Stern were members. Arnold & Co. has been dissolved since the proceedings were begun.

Wright was expelled from the New York Stock Exchange, the New York Curb Exchange, Philadelphia Stock Exchange, Chicago Stock Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade. King and Stern were suspended from the New York Stock Exchange and the New York Curb Exchange.

Curb Suspension.

The New York Curb Exchange announced today the suspension from membership of Edward H. Sherwood for inability to meet his engagements. The suspended member was a floor trader who transacted no business for the public. He joined the exchange in February, 1929.

Leading Stocks Drift Lower In Diminished Trading Total

Lack of Important Developments Apparently Responsible for Sagging Market; Bonds Listless and Lower.

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Feb. 28.—Lack of interest rather than selling pressure resulted in a generally lower drift of leading stocks in today's market. The list slipped from the start and, at the worst, prices were off 1 to around 3 points. There were mild recovery periods, however, and extreme losses were reduced in a number of instances near the close.

Exceptional slowness of the dealings on the setback contrasted with the relatively lively performance last week on a rising trend. The ticker tape frequently stood still and blocks of more than 200 shares were scarce. Transfers amounted to 560,610 shares, against 907,970 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .6 of a point at 45.5.

Brokers attributed the slip-up mainly to the lack of fresh news stimulation and to the fact that some traders stood aside on the theory the list was due for at least a temporary reaction because for three consecutive weeks it had advanced on average.

Speculative forces showed some disappointment that the long-awaited Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of the utility holding company act was not forthcoming.

Business developments lacked sparkle and sentiment was mildly chilled by the official estimate of this week's steel mill operations, placing them at 29.3 per cent of capacity, a drop of 1.1 points.

Wall Street seemed to be waiting for Congress to indicate the direction it would take on the much-disputed tax laws and for trade to show signs that it would enjoy a seasonal pick-up.

Second-Hand Autos.

The co-ordinated campaign of the automobile makers to rid dealers of their huge stocks of used cars aroused hope in some quarters, but was hardly a buying stimulant for motor shares. Rails held declines to small fractions, on the whole, although a handicap for this group was seen in the delay of the Interstate Commerce Commission in handing down a ruling on higher freight rates.

Commodities were listless, but there was some comeback in evidence at the finish. Wheat at Chicago was off ⅞ to 1⅜ cents a bushel and corn down ⅛ to ⅜. Cotton rallied to close up 15 to 40 cents a bale.

American Telephone was weak from the opening on fears the forthcoming Federal Communications Commission report on this corporation might be disheartening. The issue did better at the end, but was off 2 points net at 137.

Others on the losing side were U. S. Steel at 54⅝; Bethlehem, 58; Chrysler, 53⅝; General Motors, 34½; Westinghouse, 98¼; Douglas Aircraft, 40⅛; J. I. Case, 91; Anaconda, 32¾; American Smelting, 50⅛; U. S. Rubber, 33⅛; Seaboard Oil, 25½, and General Electric, 40⅛. Gold mines, including Dome, at 57¼; Homestake, 60⅛, and Alaska Juneau, 11⅜, were up slightly.

Bonds Dull and Lower.

The bond markt dipped today in light trading. Secondary rails, which had shown recent increases in expectation of higher rates, generally were lower today. A few utilities held up throughout and toward the close several noramlly active bonds recovered to show small gains. Volume was $4,886,400, only slightly higher than last Monday's interholiday total.

The foreign dollar list, generally weak, showed improvement in central European issues. United States Treasuries were mixed, but tended down.

Associated Press averages showed 20 rails down .4, the foreign bonds advanced .6, and the low-yield industrial and utility indices unchanged.

Losses of around a point were shown by Alleghany stamped 5s at 32; Cleveland Union Terminal 5½s at 95; Erie 5s at 15⅜; Goodyear 5s at 104; Great Northern 4s at 100; Interborough refunding 5s at 52½; Missouri Pacific 5s at 24; New York Central 3½s at 89½; Republic Steel 4½s of '50 at 112½; Southern Railway 6½s at 53, and Studebaker 6s at 68.

Heavier losses were scored by Pittsburgh, Youngstown & Ashtabula 5s, down 6⅝ at 115½; Philippine Railway 4s, down 4½ at 16½; Nickel Plate 4½s, down 5 at 47; New York Central 3½s, down 3 at 74; Louisville & Nashville 3s, down 2 at 78, and Morris & Essex 3s also down 2 at 56.

Remington Rand 4½s gained 1 point at 97. Lesser gains were made by American & Foreign Power 5s at 56; C & O 4½s at 120; Northern Pacific 4s at 92⅝; Anaconda Copper 4½s at 104¾; International Paper 5s at 87½; National Dairy 3¾s at 100⅝, and Shell Union 3½s at 101⅝.

Kodak's Employes Share $3,425,000

Rochester N. Y., Feb. 28 (AP).—Eastman Kodak Co. employes will receive tomorrow checks for a total of $3,425,000, the largest wage dividend since the company's profit-sharing plan was adopted in 1912. Sharing in the distribution will be employes who worked at least 26 weeks last year, the size of the checks depending on the length of service. In the United States and Canada 23,851 Kodak employes will share in the distribution. The total number throughout the world is 28,933. Tomorrow's payment, the twenty-sixth since the beginning of the program, will bring the total of the wage dividends to more than $40,000,000.

Buying by Trade Advances Cotton

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Cotton rallied late today following earlier quiet and irregular fluctuations. May advanced from 9.12 to 9.21 and closed at the high, with final prices 3 to 8 points net higher.

Trade buying and covering imparted the late firmness and with offers scarce, prices easily responded to this demand. The market opened 4 points lower to 1 higher, but the trade and Liverpool absorbed near-month liquidation and prices recovered.

District Banks Unite to Spur Housing Loans

Newspaper Advertising Campaign to Last Three Weeks.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Local banks have inaugurated a co-operative newspaper advertising campaign for the stimulation of loans under title 1 of the national housing act as a means for the general promotion of business. This three weeks' publicity effort was outlined and approved at a recent meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and marks the second movement of the association to advance the foregoing objectives.

Washington bankers are of the opinion that the drive will be helpful, according to President Thomas J. Groom, of the bankers' organization, as it will furnish work for men in the various building and building material trades within a very short time. As the idea will also prove helpful to the recovery program, members of the banking profession wish to assist by promoting loans of this description.

The first campaign of the bankers' association was a success and similar results are predicted for the present one. The original housing act was extended a year after its scheduled expiration and during both periods the banks of Washington made 10,815 loans under title 1 of the act, having an aggregate value of $5,384,659.

With the spring season at hand there should be a large amount of home modernization, alternations and repairs. In view of the fact that the banks have ample money, it is very probable that a considerable amount of this kind of residential work will be carried out, all of which will create employment for more men and place more funds in circulation.

Life Insurance Courses.

John E. O'Brien, registrar of the Life Insurance Institute of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, announced yesterday that the second semester courses will begin tomorrow.

There will be six courses offered in the second term. Harold Krafft, chartered life underwriter, will conduct the courses in salesmanship and psychology. Loehl O'Brien, LL. B., chartered life underwriter, will conduct two courses, one in principles of life insurance and a seminar course covering business and finance. Joseph A. Marr, LL. B., chartered life underwriter, will have charge of Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Feb. 28 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture).—Very few inquiries were being received in the Boston market for domestic wools today. Nominal quotations were unchanged from the close of last week. Cables to private concerns in Boston reported sales in Australia on Monday (today) to be firm to slightly higher than at the close last week.

Bob Burns Says—

I often wonder why actors are misjudged so much by people who don't know 'em. A rich, Middle-West farmer moved out here not long ago with his beautiful daughter. One day, a young fella came to him and asked him for his daughter's hand.

Well, sir, when the father found out that the young fella was an actor, he flew into a rage and says, "Now listen here, you loafer, I suppose you think you can marry my daughter and then I'll set you up in a home and make you rich?"

The young fella says "No, sir, you misjudge me—I'm willin' to take her jest for my room and board!"

Dr. Frank Seeks 'Honest Audit' Of New Deal

G. O. P. Policy Committee Meets to Re-interpret Party Philosophy.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—The Republican Party's program committee was called upon today by its chairman, Dr. Glenn Frank, to make "an utterly honest and objective audit" of the New Deal.

He named this as one of the three major objectives of the committee, meeting here for the first time since its creation a few months ago by the Republican National Committee at St. Louis.

The audit, Frank said in an address, "must cover everything that has been a factor in the total impact of the New Deal on the lives and enterprises of the American people."

At the same time he warned the Republicans against thinking they could return to political power if they have "nothing to offer beyond a policy of watchful waiting and playing the breaks."

The other major objectives outlined for the committee were:

A reinterpretation of "the political and economic philosophy with which the Republican Party faces the new circumstances of this new age."

The creation of a "comprehensive report of policy" concerning the problem of agriculture, labor, business taxation, taxation, unemployment and other questions Frank said were confronting the American people.

Sponsors of the meeting said 185 of the committee's total membership of 217 heard Dr. Frank, who at a subsequent press conference declined to predict whether the program group would make a report before the November Congressional elections.

It was up to the committee, he said, to decide that question. Likewise John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the party's national committee, told the program makers they were at liberty to use their own judgment as to procedure.

Hamilton's assurances that the national committee had no intention of squiring the policy group into decisions gained additional weight among the members when the chairman announced after his morning speech that he would leave at once for Washington. Some of the conferees said they had expected Hamilton would remain for the two-day sessions.

Leper Crusader Dies; Won Law By Scaring D. C.

Congressmen Were Chary of Putting John Early Out of Capitol.

By the Associated Press.

Carville, La., Feb. 28.—John Early, North Carolina mountaineer, whose escape from a leper colony and subsequent appearance before a Congressional committee meeting in Washington provided a sensation several years ago, died here today.

For years John Early was known as Washington's "one-man" leper colony. On several occasions he escaped from the Carville reservation and each time came to this city. His purpose was to lobby on Capitol Hill for better conditions at the leper institution.

Although Early eventually was credited with securing Federal control of the Carville colony, his frequent visits to Washington usually threw the Capital into a furor.

Even Police Flee.

On one appearance here, Early wandered into Police Headquarters, then in the District Building, and everyone left hurriedly except a Post reporter and one policeman. They talked to the leper crusader and succeeded in persuading him to depart.

Authorities, however, followed him to Union Station. There it was learned he spent a $2 bill. For several days thereafter, residents of the city refused to accept a bill of this denomination when receiving change.

When Early appeared on Capitol Hill at committee discussions on the leper colony bill, he opened the committee room door and announced:

"I'm John Early, a patient from the leper colony at Carville, La.

"What are you doing up here," gasped a frightened member of the committee.

Once Freed as Cured.

"I walked out of Carville," Early responded, "and came here to tell you gentlemen something about how much we patients need to have that colony made over into a United States hospital."

Committee members were chary about seizing the man and he remained in the room until the bill was reported favorably.

Early was 64 at his death. He had suffered from leprosy for many years. On November 19, 1926, he was released from the Carville institution as cured. Medical authorities said progress of the disease had been arrested.

Early returned to his 50-acre farm near Tyron, N. C. But later, reportedly with a relapse, he returned to Carville.

He will be buried in the National Cemetery at Baton Rouge as a veteran of the Spanish-American War.

Bank Official Named.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board appointed Howard Phillips, of Orlando, Fla., yesterday a director of the Jacksonville branch of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank. Phillips, who is executive vice president of Dr. Phillips Co., will serve until the end of 1939.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Crime Pays—but Only Occasionally.

Merely because I publish a great many hands in which outrageously overbid contracts meet with success, it must not be thought that "crime pays." For every such hand I could produce six or eight other hands in which the overbidder meets defeat. The trouble is that there is no "color" in these latter—they would make tedious reading. The one thing to be said for overambitious contracts is that they often lead to excellent play. If, in addition to skill, the declarer is also gifted with unusual luck in finding adverse cards well placed, the net result is a hand that makes "good copy."

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 9 4 ♡ 9 6 ◇ A Q J 7 ♣ A 8 6 3
♠ Q 10 3 2 ♡ 8 ◇ 10 9 6 4 3 ♣ 7 4 2	North West East South	♠ K 8 5 ♡ K 7 4 ◇ K 8 5 2 ♣ K J 9
	♠ A 7 6 ♡ A Q J 10 5 3 2 ◇ — ♣ Q 10 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 ♡	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Redbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's four-diamond bid was all right, inasmuch as he had two of the three top diamond honors and better than 2½ tricks in his hand. His five-club bid, however, in the face of South's simple heart rebid was atrocious. After the latter bid, South would have been a "sissy" to have failed to jump to six hearts. North had virtually begged him to do this very thing and South's holding amply justified his acceptance of the invitation. His redouble was a shade optimistic but not bad, considering that he felt certain he could not be defeated more than one trick with, of course, a good chance to make the contract.

West opened the deuce of spades. Declarer carefully played dummy's nine spot, East had to part with his king, and declarer won. With no diamond in his hand, declarer found himself seriously handicapped for entry cards to the dummy. Assuming that the heart finesse was "right," it still would be necessary to throw one club on the diamond ace, to establish a second diamond honor for another discard and, finally, to reach that established diamond. To do all this, the situation demanded that declarer risk leading a spade right back toward dummy's jack. West won with the queen and promptly shifted to a club. Dummy's ace won and at this point care was required. Had declarer taken the heart finesse on the spot, East, by covering the nine, could have defeated the contract. Declarer was not careless, however. He deferred playing trumps, preferring to lead the diamond ace, discarding a club, and then the diamond queen through East. East covered (had he not done so, declarer merely would have discarded his remaining club), and declarer ruffed. A spade was then led to the jack and the diamond jack was cashed, declarer discarding his club. Now the heart finesse was taken and it did not matter whether or not East covered the nine. As it happened, he didn't, but the nine held and a second finesse permitted declarer to pick up the outstanding trumps without loss.

Without the excellent lay of cards found and, indeed, without the spade lead on West's part, the overbid contract could not have succeeded.
